Ed Amack was in Omaha last week and while there took a special course in embalming. The course was arranged for by the Omaha Casket Co., and instructions and demonstrations were given by two experts from the east. On Wednesday Mr. Amack received word that he had successfully passed the state examination. The manager of the Omaha Casket Co., states that this last examination was the severest that has yet been given by the state board, and we are pleased to note that Mr. Amack was successful in passing it.

Commissioner Tomlinson suggests that it would be to the interests of the water consumers of Red Cloud to clean out their meter boxes and see that they are tightly covered before cold weather sets in. Mr. Tomlinson finds that many of the boxes are filled with mud, water and trash, and there is danger of the meters freezing unless they are attended to. He has also found about twenty meters that are not in working order, some of them running backward and others not running at all, many of them being put in reversed.
