The Lawn Mower.

The lawn mower is generally much abused by the majority of those who use it. When nicely adjusted and in good working order it may be kept so by a hair's breadth turn of the adjusting screws or bolts, and no one should be allowed to meddle with these parts unless he fully understands them. The blades of the lawn mower strike the cutting bar in such a manner as to be largely self sharpening, and no machine, if well oiled and adjusted, will need sharpening unless it is run into stones or other hard substances that may dull or bend the knives. The ordinary machine oil used upon larger machines than the lawn mower, on wagons, etc., is too heavy for the lawn mower, except in very hot weather, and should be thinned with an equal amount of kerosene. No machine will keep in perfect working order for a great length of time without cleaning, and the lawn mower, which is run through so much dust and dirt, should be taken apart once or twice every season, each part carefully cleaned and wiped and then freshly oiled. The machines with large wheels and ball bearings run more easily than many of the older patterns, but the latter if kept in perfect order will run with comparative ease and will do good service for many years.—Suburban Life.

Wonderful Paintings.

It may not be generally known, perhaps, that the highest price paid for a picture has not been in modern times, but was at so remote a period as that of Alexander the Great, who gave Apelles a sum equal to $211,000 for painting his portrait. The king was represented holding thunder, which, Pliny says, was so lifelike that the hand seemed to come out of the picture. Alexander was delighted with the portrait, had it placed in the temple of Diana, at Ephesus, and forbade any one but Apelles thenceforth to draw his likeness.

Apelles attempted another portrait, which at first sight did not please his royal patron, but while it was being inspected, says the voracious Pliny, a horse passing by neighed at the horse represented in the piece, supposing it to be alive, upon which the painter remarked that the horse was a better judge of painting than the king.
