SMITH CENTER

(From the Messenger.)

Over in the Salem country a fearful epidemic of swine plague has been raging this fall and winter. Very few farmers east, west or north for several miles but what lost heavily.

Yesterday afternoon a little girl came running out of the kitchen door of the old Bryan house, yelling lustily for help in a tone that indicated that something terrible was taking place. Those in the immediate vicinity rushed into the building and found a young woman lying senseless on the floor. It appears that there has been a quarrel and Mrs. Etta O'Hara, the injured woman, had thrown a flatiron at her step father, Andy Cropper, proprietor of the hotel. He retaliated by throwing an enameled stewpan at her. This struck her on the head and she fell to the floor. Dr. Relihan was called and succeeded in restoring her to consciousness, after three hours' work. She relapsed into unconsciousness again last night, but is a little better this afternoon. Mr. Cropper did not deny striking her, but told those first on the scene that the woman was fighting him and that he struck her. He was arrested, charged with assault with intent to kill, and was released upon giving a bond of $500.

LEBANON

(From the Times.)

C. M. Scrivner of Red Cloud, Nebr., a son of V. H. of this city, and his friend, Omer Butler of the World Herald, Omaha, Neb., came in Friday evening and boarded the train Saturday morning for Limon, Colo., where they each have a farm. Mr. Scrivner is of the firm of Scrivner contractors and builders of Red Cloud and Mr. Butler is a son of Jas. Butler, the main harness man at the same place.

Quite a little excitement was stirred up in town Thursday when word came in from the city well west of town that some of the workmen had become entombed. They were tunneling from one well to another when the bank caved off onto them. All the men escaped without injury with the exception of Wm. Sparks who was buried under about four feet of mother earth. All the available rigs were put into use and it wasn't long until a large crowd gathered. Everybody rendered all the assistance possible and in a short time Will was on terra firma but with his shoulder quite badly hurt and nearly exhausted.

FRANKLIN

(From the Sentinel.)

Collie Bowers of Holdrege is in the city, called here by the serious illness of his father, M. H. Bowers.

While Mrs. Kessler and her daughters were at church Sunday, Mrs. Reeder, the mother of Mrs. Kessler, who is 84 years old, was stricken with paralysis in the left side.

Mrs. J. M. Barber's black eye does not really mean that the domestic atmosphere of the Barber hearth has been caused by a genuine family row, but it was really caused by the lid pulling off from a base burner that was being set in place, the same striking Mrs. Barber near the eye.

CAMPBELL

(From the Citizen.)

Married—On Sunday, December 23, at the home of the bride's parents, near Campbell, Miss Emma Koch to Mr. Gottlieb Binder, Rev. Goetz, officiating.

A happy event occurred Wednesday night, the 19th inst., when almost all the young people and a few of the old ones, members of Zion Norwegian Lutheran church, surprised their minister Rev. H. L. Berg, on his 48th birthday.

Alec Monroe is carrying a hand encased in bandages until it looks like a sugar cured ham, all as the result of a gasoline stove explosion in his shop Saturday. The tank had been filled so full that it had run over, and the man who did the job neglected to screw on the cap. As a result when the generator was touched off some very interesting fire works followed. Alec carried the blazing stove into the street, but one of his hands was badly burned in consequence.
