That's What a Spreader Will Do If Used as It Should Be

The Great Western Spreader

Is Made for the Man Who Wants the Best

If You Have 125 loads of manure to spread you can increase the value of your crop this year more than enough to pay for a spreader. We have a 64-page book which explains the whole situation.

A manure spreader will bring you bigger and quicker returns than any other three implements you have on your farm.

The Plan is not a theory, it is an actual fact, backed up by 18 years' actual experience.

The Book is free. It is worth $100 but won't cost you a cent. If it does not do you any good, it won't do you any harm. It's brimful of valuable information.

A Manure Spreader Must Be Made Extra Strong

DON'T buy a light spreader. DON'T buy a spreader that has a pine pole and pine frame.

DON'T buy an experiment, a machine that has been on the market only a few years.

DON'T let any manufacturer's experiment at your expense.

DON'T buy a spreader that has a narrow front axle. If you do you can't top dress corn successfully.

DON'T buy a spreader with the front axle set ahead of the front end of the body because practically all the load will be carried on the rear axle, making heavy draft.

The Great Western is a great big heavy machine. The main frame is all oak, oak pole, hickory double trees.

It has a great, big, strong 18 inch malleable iron axle with fifth wheel, double oak bolster, wide front axle, the wheels track.

It has an endless axon that is always ready to load; no reverse gears, trips, springs or contraptions to get out of order. Spreads all kinds of manure.

It has a galvanized steel hood and end gate. Keeps the manure away from the beater when loading. Prevents churning when starting. Acts as wind shield when spreading.

It has light draft, because the load is nearly equally balanced on the front and rear axles, bringing the team close to the load. Front and rear wheels track. Beater shaft runs in ball and socket bearings.

It is so simple that a boy can handle it easily.

Don't let anyone sell you a cheap substitute that he says is "just as good" because there is no other just as good or nearly as good.

Tribute to the Phonograph

Even John Philip Sousa, the great bandmaster, who has no use for Phonographs, has been forced to recognize the Phonograph as a formidable competitor. The two-step king says that people will no longer go to concerts if they can have music in their own homes so easily and so cheaply as they can with the Phonograph. This is an unwilling tribute, but it is nevertheless a tribute. The man who has a Phonograph has a concert in his own house. Even a king could not have more. At our store you can hear them any time.

There moved into our neighborhood from the east, not so very long ago, a very strange family. If perchance you happen to look toward their farm you can at most any time see one of them standing on the highest point of land seemingly looking for something. These strange people say "they get scarcely any sleep at all; they have to watch their stock to keep their neighbors from stealing it." They seem to have strange delusions that people are trying in every way to harm them, but so far they have failed to make these old timers believe these things.
