"The Girl and The Stampede." A thrill in each line, a laugh in each scene, a play undoubtedly revolutionizing the ordinary western drama. The public today craves a novelty in plays. This is the reason why this great western comedy drama was written. The author spent some three years studying western characters and gathering material to make "The Girl and The Stampede" what it is, a play worth seeing. At the opera house Saturday, October 5th.

The dark, cloudy days we have been experiencing during the past week clearly demonstrate the necessity for a twenty-four hour electric light service. Many people are depending entirely upon the city plant for their light, and when a dark day comes they are almost compelled to suspend business. Should the city administration conclude to establish a twenty-four hour service, there would be many power users who would change from steam and gasoline to electric motive power.

"The Girl and The Stampede," Victor Lambert's great comedy drama, a western play that has won on the esteem of the general public, enjoying clean cut and truthful western life. The play is vastly different from the ordinary western melodrama, as it is free from trashy blood and thunder situations so often resorted to. The characters are well drawn, exceptionally strong and not exaggerated. With a vein of bright sparkling comedy running through every scene. The clergy, press and the public pronounce "The Girl and The Stampede" a play among plays. At the opera house Saturday, October 5th.

J. S. Gilham, Republican candidate for county judge, and Edward Hansen, Republican candidate for clerk of the district court, were in Blue Hill Monday on their way to Bladen to attend the county fair. Both are Red Cloud residents and have lived in the county a number of years. In fact, Mr. Gilham is one of the early settlers and is well acquainted throughout the county through his present and past connection with the county seat papers. For some time past he has been furnishing the Argus with articles relative to some of this county's oldest settlers.—Blue Hill Leader.
