Notice.

All parties knowing themselves indebted to me will take notice that after March 1, 1908, all notes and accounts unpaid will be placed with my attorney with instructions to proceed to force collection. J. O. BUTLER.

Sort of Postponed.

A young fellow in Pittsburg intended to ask her father's consent the other evening, but changed his mind. He has decided to wait till the old gentleman is disabled from a fall or till something equally propitious turns up. It happened in this way:

When he reached the house the girl met him at the door, pearly tears stealing down her fair cheeks.

"Oh, George," she whispered, "I am so glad you have come! Please go into the library and see if you can calm father. He is so excited and is raging about, knocking over the furniture and breaking things."

"Certainly," George said briskly. "What is the matter with the old gentleman?"

"I'm sure I don't know," she said. "He was all right, and I just began to tell him that you wanted to marry me."—Lippincott's.

Quite a "Character."

Here is a "character" given to a servant on leaving her last situation: "The bearer has been in my house a year, less eleven months. During this time she has shown herself diligent at the house door, frugal in work, mindful of herself, prompt in excuses and honest when everything was out of the way."—London Tit-Bits.

A Superb Animal.

During a fierce charge of Confederate cavalry at Murfreesboro an officer was killed and the cavalry driven back. The horse the officer had ridden was a magnificent animal, and he had not been taught to retreat. Riderless he kept on his way, and as he dashed through the Federal battery the sight of him was indescribably grand. His nostrils were extended wide, his eyes fairly blazed, and he clutched the bit determinedly with his teeth as he came on like the wind, with his saddle flaps flying until he looked as if he were himself flying instead of wildly running. Every one gave him room as he dashed onward. An officer shouted that he would give $100 to any one who would capture that superb animal, but all seemed too much bound up in admiration of the noble beast to make the effort, and he sped on and disappeared in the blue distance.

Profanity.

The more ignorant the man the more he swears. When you hear a man swearing it is a sign that he is an ignorant man and has lived in uncultured surroundings all his life. A well known writer on the development of language asserts that the use of expletives has been steadily diminishing as a result of the cultivation that renders coarseness generally distasteful. Apart from the moral aspects of the case, it is held that what may be called the explosives of talk not only repel the listener, but weaken the argument. An excess of gestures or facial expression, of grimaces, shrugs and manual flourishes, either shows the poverty of the tongue or the lightness of the cause advocated.—Athenian Globe.

Patrician Names in Humble Life.

India is not the only country where historic names are borne by people in humble life. The same thing is found in the Italian Tyrol. The district formerly belonged to Venice, and many of the peasants are probably descended from Venetian grandees who in the palmy days of the republic were lords of the soil. This would explain a certain eastern flavor, for Venice was nothing if not Byzantine. A common surname in the Tyrol is Constantine. Climbing in the Dolomites, writes a correspondent, I was accompanied by one of the family. It gave an added dignity to the ascents to feel that my guide was a possible descendant of the emperors of the east, and he looked the part.

Whittier's Humor.

A story is told of Whittier which illustrates the character of his humor. Two of his neighbors, an aged brother and sister, had accumulated a competency. He thought they were working harder than was necessary in view of their age and worldly accumulations and spoke of it.

"We must lay by something for our last sickness and have enough left to bury us," said the sister.

"Mary," replied Whittier, "did they ever know any one in his last sickness to stick by the way for want of funds?"

Australian bushmen believe that the sun is angry with the moon and hacks at it till it grows smaller and smaller and finally disappears, when it is supposed to beg for a respite and soon begins to grow again, but that directly it attains its full size the wrathful sun recommences its attack upon it.
