The British house of lords is a survival of the ancient aristocracy of the viuglom, which for a long tlme wase kurreme in all national matters. Wher the vemocratic sentiment won a place for itself in the shape of the house of commons the natural and appureotly indestructille conservatixm of the Brit ish people held on to the House of lords, as a check upon the commons and m perpetual reminder of the anclent insti ution. The senate of the United States was the result of the compromise struck hetween the Nationalists and that formed the constitution. Soms
