The Growing Deficit.

The fiscal year which closed with June showed a deficit in the national treasury of $60,000,000. For July, the first month of the new fiscal year, the deficit is almost $25,000,000.

This speaks eloquently of the "republican genius for financiering and statesmanship" that we hear so much about.

In the midst of hard times the republican administration, after having issued $150,000,000 of interest-bearing bonds, is plunging the country head over heels into debt.

It is not only collecting in taxes, a vastly larger amount of revenues than ever were collected before from the people of the United States, but it is spending recklessly a good deal more than it is collecting.

Navy expenses have risen in ten years, from 34 millions to 118 millions. Army expenses have risen from 48 millions to 110 millions. This is merely a sample. In the last three years of republican rule congress has appropriated $3,428,000,000, or 35 millions more than was appropriated during the four years of the civil war!

Is it wonderful if times are hard? These tremendous taxes are a constant drain on the resources of the country. They are piling up by leaps and bounds. Now we shall have to tax ourselves not only to pay enormous expenses, but to clean up this heavy and fast-growing republican deficit.

In this connection it is well to bear in mind that there is no faintest promise of economy made in the republican platform, nor by republican candidates.

On Friday evening, July 31, the opera house was filled to the limit with an attentive audience who witnessed one of the best plays given since the completion of the hall in 1905. It was a five-act comedy, "A Modern Woodman," given under the auspices of Guide Rock camp No. 1984, M. W. A. The play was written by Lieut. Walter M. Ellis of Rock Island, Illinois. He and his son Ray each take part in the play and Mr. Ellis drills other players for the performance. He usually gives ten rehearsals, but here he gave but five which shows that Guide Rock has some splendid local talent. The play was interesting throughout and points out most emphatically the advantage of fraternal insurance. The Guide Rock orchestra furnished splendid music. The members are: Miss Lou Watt, piano; E. Charles Moore, cornet; Geo. Simpson, violin; Ernest Hayes, clarinet; Don Bayles, trap drum.

Those taking part were: Lieut. W. M. Ellis, Ray Ellis, R. W. Robertson, Russell Vaughan, John Schultz, Raymond Hillyer, Lloyd Cassell, Geo. Britten, H. S. Reed, H. Brehm, Chas. Hodges, L. W. Ely, C. E. Vaughan, Edna Watt, Geneva Robinson, Austie Stafford, Mabel Guy, and several members of the Woodman lodge.

The principal features of the play were: act 1, the run on the Citizens bank of Souix Falls, S. D., during the panic of 1893. At this time Wm. Noble, the Woodman, deposits his M. W. A. certificate and $500 cash for his family. He goes to the Klondike, where he dies before the end of the year. He had paid his assessments and dues for one year ahead. His wife had opposed her husband taking insurance and she did not now of the existence of the certificate. The cashier deposits immediately after this deposit.

Act 2, the home of the Noble's in Michigan shows the poverty of the widow, daughter and little son. The home is to be sold to satisfy the mortgage. Schlitz and Maggie comes to blows over the merits of their respective nationalities. Teddy, the dude, who is calling on Jennie delivers a knock-out; Schlitz gets the worst of it.

Act 3, residence of James Steele, formerly John McFarland the absconding bank cashier. Teddy comes to borrow money. Alice espouses his cause, pleading with her father to lend him money, hoping thereby to get Teddy for a husband or at least to enter society which had seemed to be a little shy about taking up James Steele and daughter in spite of his wealth and influence. The rough rider, Ned Burke returns. He has the beneficial certificate and receipt for same left in the care of the Souix Falls banker by Wm. Noble. He had been in the Klondike and knew of the suffering and death of Noble. Willie Noble, the newsboy, comes to plead with James Steele not foreclose the mortgage as his mother is ill. Burke is shot by Steele who secures the beneficial certificate and attempts to burn it, when Willie jumps from behind a screen and makes off with it by the aid of Burke, although the latter is badly wounded.

Act 4, shows the officers and members of M. W. A. No. 725 in session and the clerk reads the report of the committee who finds that Wm. Noble was in good standing at the time of his death. The camp voted to accept the report and see that the widow got her money. The camp was entertained with a solo by Miss Lou Watt.

Act 5, the widow gets the money. James Steele, who came to try to get Burke to secure the papers again, is soundly snubbed by the latter, and is later arrested for the bank affair at Souix Falls.

Every player carried his part most excellently. The receipts amounted to over $128.00.

Grain Dealers Interested.

The grain dealers of the country are lined up in support of the National Corn Exposition to be held at Omaha, December 9 to 19. No class of persons associated with the grain growing industry, from the farmer to the consumer, is more elated over the constantly developing prospects of an immense show than these men whose business it is to take the grain from the farmer and turn it into the channels of commercial trade.

The grain dealer is an important factor in this great industry; his time and money are employed in pushing the grain forward to the manufacturer. The miller, the wholesale dealer, are each performing a service in the line of commercial trade that educates to an appreciation of the effort that the National Corn Exposition is making for better grain, from which better flour and better food products can be manufactured.

Children Helping the Forest Movement.

The prairie town without trees is cheerless and unattractive. Few things add more to the attractiveness of a town than rows of thrifty shade trees.

Village and town improvement societies and civic associations have done much to promote tree-planting, especially in the prairie regions of the middle west. Where trees adapted to local conditions have been planted, and where the citizens have cared for them and taken an interest in them, the results have been remarkable.

A public spirited man residing in a city in Missouri has been doing commendable work along this line, in connection with the Civic Improvement League of his city. In the year 1901 he planted a large quantity of seeds of various trees in nursery rows. He carefully tended the young seedlings, and a few years later dug them up, labeled them, and turned them over to the school children free, upon condition that they should be planted and cared for.

Since the trees started life with the beginning of the present century, they were called "century trees", and this gave them additional interest.

Each child was given printed directions, which were headed as follows: "Ornament your homes—Plant Century Trees, seedlings 1901—they are living monuments; watch them develop—they began with the century, and the century, as it advances, marks the record of their age year by year."

Those who received trees were directed to dig holes two feet in diameter and one and one-half feet deep. They were told to keep the roots of the trees moist and covered until planted, to see that all torn ends of roots were cut off smoothly, and to cut back the side branches about a quarter or third of their length, or, if the tree was a straight shoot without branches, to cut back the tip a few inches. This pruning was to balance the loss of roots in digging up the trees.

In planting the tree, they were told to spread the roots out into natural position, and to set the tree about an inch deeper than it stood in the nursery; to use good rich soil, but to allow no fertilizer or mulch to come in direct contact with the roots; to work the soil carefully about the roots, and to water the tree plentifully every few days after it was set out, and during the dry weather of summer.

Five or six thousand trees were given away in this manner. Two or three trees were given to each child who asked for them, and almost every child did so. There were many species and naturally some died, but few children lost all they planted. Each child who received trees was required to fill out a slip giving his name and address, and the place where the tree was planted. The trees in public places will be labeled when they have grown somewhat larger.

The town is now dotted with these little "century trees", which have become the pride of those who planted them.
