

Eat What

You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it.

Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength.

You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Preparation of Seed Bed for Corn Planting

turned ground after the plow. By this method the subsoil will be more thoroughly firmed, and the surface firmed under the favorable conditions then existing, as the section of the harrow will cover all the ground plowed about three times.

The objects of plowing are to alter the texture of the soil to a considerable depth, and to bury completely any vegetable or other organic matter on the surface of the ground as weeds absorb the moisture which is needed for the crop. Do not plow when the ground is so wet that the bottom of the furrow slice turns up slick, and the particles of soil run together rather than crumble. Such a surface will bake in the sunshine, and the clods thus formed will sometimes remain unchanged during the entire season. Do not fail to use your harrow if any length of time intervenes between plowing and planting, so as to stir the surface after rain, or kill the weeds before planting. It is a splendid help in firming a seed bed to take a good four-horse team, and a heavy roller, and roll the field before planting. Newly germinated weeds have few roots and are easily torn loose by harrowing; therefore use the harrow freely. Professor Bowman says, that weeds and grass allowed to grow up in corn stalk land in the spring, before plowing, are injurious to the physical condition of the soil because they compact and harden the surface, which in turn allows the rapid evaporation of moisture. When this green mat is turned under later, its acts as a partition between the furrow slice and the bottom of the furrow. Weeds also utilize a large amount of available plant food, which is always scarce in spring plowed ground, and at the same time the decaying green material renders the soil more or less acid.

A light coating of manure from a spreader over your corn land is very beneficial, but refrain from spreading green manure too thickly, as rotting green manure requires a great deal of moisture which must necessarily be drawn from the surface soil, and often causes the furrow slice to become very dry within a few days.

In parts of Nebraska where there is ample rainfall, we would recommend that the check-row be used in planting. Some farmers prefer listing, claiming that it stands drouth better, is easier to kill the weeds and the corn stands up better under a high wind. Take a little pride in trying to get the rows perfectly straight, as the satisfaction you will experience all through the season will amply repay you for the trouble. A farmer is oftentimes judged by the little things about his farm, which some think make no particular difference. Use a rigid neck-yoke on your planter, and do not urge your team too much. Do not fail to know that the planter, or lister, is working properly, so that the stand may be as nearly perfect as possible.

In fall plowing, or on stubble ground when it is considered desirable to list, do not plant with your lister, but use the corn planter with check row in lister furrow. The satisfaction experienced by after results will amply repay.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

The Republicans in Congress are getting themselves into a pretty snarl over their alleged tariff revision. Apparently President Taft and some other members of the party deluded themselves with the belief that "the tariff could be revised by his friends," but the attempt has served only to demonstrate the accuracy of the Democratic contention that the Republican party is the creature of trusts and special interests, that its members are beholden to them for their election to Congress, and that however insistent may be the demands of the voters or the walls of the consumers, they dare not disobey their masters. Were the tariff system what it purports to be, simply a method of encouraging infant industries to a point where they can stand alone, the claim that the tariff law should be revised by its friends would be logical and consistent, but whatever may have been the fundamental theory of the protective system, as administered by the party in power it has become simply a method of, enhancing the profits and perpetuating the monopolies of its beneficiaries who in return for the favors conferred upon them send men to Congress to carry out their wishes whenever a revision is undertaken. The truth of these assertions is becoming apparent to Mr. Taft and other theoretical advocates of that fundamental policy of the Republican party. Already the President is beginning to realize that in the near future he will be confronted with the dilemma of vetoing the Aldrich-Payne bill because it is in no sense a "revision downwards," or of signing a bill which in no essential makes good the pledges of his party, as expressed in the platform on which he was nominated and elected.

Behind the closed doors of the Finance Committee Senator Aldrich and his colleagues are gradually but surely eliminating from the Payne bill every feature which could, by any stretch of the imagination, be regarded as in the interest of the consumer. Republican senators on the Finance Committee complain bitterly of the selfishness of the protected interests. They say frankly that these men are so insistent on the maximum of protection that they demand rates which must prove the destruction of kindred industries. The tanners of hides insist upon duties which the makers of boots and shoes declare will prove their ruin. The steel trust insists upon duties on bar steel which make it impossible for the manufacturers of tools to turn out their products at a profit. "But, why do you need these inordinate demands?" your correspondent asked a Republican member of Finance Committee. The reply was as illuminating as it was frank. "They are our friends," said the Senator "and we cannot afford to incur their enmity."

Whether the next House of Representatives is Republican or Democratic depends entirely upon whether it is possible to deceive a majority of the people all the time. The Republican candidates for re-election will go on the stump and point to the magnificent reduction of five-one-hundredths of a pound they have made in the duty on raw sugar. Of course they will say nothing of the fact that as long as they left the duty on refined sugar intact the reduction profited only the sugar trust. They will point to the increased duty on gloves and hosiery as evidence of the solicitude of their party for the girls and women working in the knitting factories and numbering several hundred thousand but they will say nothing of the consumers compelled to pay higher prices or wear thinner gloves and stockings and numbering several millions. If the voters think, instead of permitting the Republican politicians to do their thinking for them November 1910, there will be a Democratic majority in the next House of Representatives.
