It has become known that a number of young boys in town have formed a sort of club under the leadership of one about thirteen years of age provided themselves with skeleton keys and have entered different residences among them those of Rev. Cressman, Rev. Jarboe and Henry McCune and stolen some articles. Five of the boys are known to the authorities and the matter is now being investigated. These boys are starting the wrong way and bid fair to waste themselves instead of making men. They should be looked after, especially by their parents.

Nothing pays better than good roads. It costs something to secure them, but they are the arteries which connect city and country, along which the currents of comfort perpetually flow. Bad roads, full of chuck holes, kill time, team and temper. Be sure then that money thus intelligently expended is wisely invested and sure to realize the future results.

There are a few towns where the stores present a more pleasing appearance than those of our own town. Our merchants take a pride in the appearance of their respective places of business and such pride is certainly commendable. That is not all, they carry good, clean stocks of merchandise and their reputation for fair dealing draws a splendid patronage from the surrounding territory.
The entertainment-lecture given by Chas. C. Atwood in the Christian church last Friday night, under the title "The Old Flag," was rich in its setting, profound in its principles and truths and delightful in its appeals to intense interest, keen, relish and uplifting influences. He must be heard to be fully appreciated in oratory and tender poesies. The living pictures by home talent was the leading feature of brilliant surprises and most satisfactory entertainment.

Billy Jones wrote on the blackboard "Billy Jones can hug the girls better than any boy in the school." The teacher seeing it, called him up. "William, did you write that?" she said. The children waited for Billy to come out, when they began to guff him. "Got a hickin', didn't you?" "No," said Bill. "Get jawed?" "No," "What did she do?" they asked. "Shan't tell," said Bill, but it pays to advertise.
Boys with hats on the back of their heads and long hair hanging down over their foreheads and cigarettes and very smutty stories in their foul mouths are cheaper than old worn out work horses. Nobody wants them at any price. Men don't employ them and sensible girls won't marry them. They are not worth their keeping to anybody and it is not likely that they will be able to keep themselves. If anybody should happen to read this who answers the above description, let him take a look at himself and jump in a well and say: "Here goes nothing."
The man who edits the average county newspaper can not well avoid treading on somebody's toes continually; must expect to be censured often for unintentional failures; must expect hard work and little thanks; must expect to be called a coward because he does not "pitch into" everything that somebody thinks is wrong, and a fool if he speaks out too plainly on public evils; he must expect to grind other people's axes—and turn the grindstone himself. Still we think it is one of the noblest professions on earth; the one in which the earnest man can do the most good to his fellow man, and in which an honorable man can yield much power for good.
The term printers devil as applied to the boy who does the choring around a printing office has a peculiar romantic history. In the early days printing was styled the "black art," and printers were supposed to be in league with Satan. But it was in the time of Aldus Minutius in Venice that the matter took a serious turn. This was the famous printer who first published the Greek and Roman classics. He took in his employ a negro boy who was homeless on the streets of Venice. The people supposed the boy was an imp from Satan and that he assisted in printing. Mobs collected about the office and were about to wreck it, when the boy was brought forward and exhibited showing that the boy was flesh and blood, but he was still called "the printers devil" and every boy in his position ever since has been so called.

YOU'LL find that it's poor policy to shop around in buying clothes; to go where you see the lowest price quoted. Price doesn't mean much in clothes unless you know what the quality of the goods is.

If you govern your buying by the price you pay, without reference to what you get for it, you'll find some mighty cheap clothes for sale; their cheapness is likely to be more in quality than in price. But you'll find plenty of good clothes, too;
