The people of Lincoln unveiled the statue of the martyred president Monday afternoon. The speakers omitted to honor the memory of the greatest man of the last half century by imitating his example. Some day some speaker will condense into a speech not longer than the Gettysburg speech or the celebrated message to Congress an eulogy of Lincoln which may fittingly endure.

At a meeting of the democratic editors of the fifth congressional district held at Holdrege last Friday, an association was formed for the purpose of conducting a systematic campaign for the candidates this fall. J. R. Cooper of Holdrege is president and F. C. Ayers of Holdrege is secretary treasurer. An executive committee was appointed consisting of the above officers and D. B. Giel of Grand Island, C. B. Hale of Red Cloud and C. E. Dedrick of Superior. It is thought that a great deal of good may be accomplished by this organization.

Governor Marshall, Democratic candidate for the office of the Vice-Presidency, enjoys the distinction of being the first Democratic governor that the state of Indiana has had for eighteen years. Like Governor Wilson, this is the first public office he has ever had altho he has always taken an active part in politics. During his incumbency he has shown that he is a genuine administrative reformer by the series of reforms that he had inaugurated in that state. He is economical and practical, a fluent speaker, a clear thinker and in every way well qualified to fill the important office to which he has been nominated.

We note with a great deal of pleasure that property owners and residents of this city are taking a good deal of pains this season in making their places attractive. We believe that the city as a city ought to aid and encourage this spirit and it occurs to us that a very simple but effective way to assist in this matter would be to paint all the telephone and electric light poles white. Two coats of paint would transfer these unsightly poles into things that at least would be offensive. We are fully aware that it would be much better to have all the wires under ground but that would involve the expenditures of a considerable sum and is not necessary but it would not cost a great deal to paint these poles and the appearance of our streets would be greatly benefited. Paint the poles.

Governor Woodrow Wilson, the democratic nominee for the presidency needs no introduction to the American people. He was born in Virginia in 1856, was graduated from Princeton with the degree of A. B. He then finished a law course in the university of Virginia and after receiving his diploma, practiced his profession for eighteen months at Atlanta, Georgia. He then took two years finishing course in the science of government at the John Hopkins University. The next three years found him as instructor of political economy at Bryn Mawr College. In 1890 he accepted the chair of jurisprudence and politics at Princeton and two years later he was elected president of that institution.

About two years ago the Democrats of New Jersey wanted a candidate for Governor who would clean up that boss ridden, trust infected state and they chose Woodrow Wilson as their standard bearer. He was elected by a majority of fifty thousand notwithstanding the fact that the republicans had carried the state by more than eighty five thousand two years before.

In reforming New Jersey, Governor Wilson had passed through the legislature of that state a corrupt practices act, designed to put a stop to the improper use of money in election, and an effective one too; a workingman's compensation act; a law for the regulation of railroads and public utilities, providing a state commission with power to fix rates, and to make physical valuation of properties a basis for determining the fairness and justice of rates; an act regulating the cold storage of foods; commission form of government for cities, including the initiative, referendum and recall, direct primaries for elective office; abolishment of all nominating conventions; civil service for election officer; a non-partisan blanket ballot; primaries for United States Senators and a long list of other remedial legislative measures. His work as Governor stamped him as a progressive of the real substantial kind and which the people of these United States demand shall sit in the President's chair.

The fall campaign was formally opened here Saturday night by Honorable R. D. Sutherland, democratic candidate for Congress. Notwithstanding the fact that the streets were muddy and the people were a bit uncomfortable Mr. Sutherland easily held the attention of the large crowd that had gathered to hear him.

The speaker paid a glowing tribute to the democratic standard bearers Wilson and Marshall and also to Honorable J. H. Morehead candidate for the office of Governor. Mr. Sutherland then explained his position and pledged his support to all legislation seeking to lower the high cost of living. He stated firmly that he was absolutely committed to the reduction of the tariff downward and if elected he would fight for the interest of the people. Characterizing the high protective tariff as a national menace he stated that the people would no longer submit to the high handed robbery of plutocracy. A prohibited tariff robbed the consumer, stifled competition and is an instrument in the hands of unscrupulous men to pile up enormous fortunes. The consumer is the man that needs protection and Mr. Sutherland pledged himself to do all in his power to better the conditions of the ordinary man.

He then read extracts from the speeches of President Taft and former President Roosevelt in which each accused the other of dishonesty and treachery. The two greatest exponents of republicanism vied with each other in the efforts to denounce the actions of the other, and if they were so radically antagonistic how is it possible for either of them to gain a respectful hearing? The low methods each used in attacking the other disqualified them both from being seriously considered as fit candidates for the highest office in the gift of the nation.

Mr. Sutherland was in his happiest vein, his voice was as clear as a bell, his gestures and appearance most pleasing and his address as a whole showed that he is capable and competent to represent the people of this district in a masterly and efficient manner. He made many new friends while here and his speech was discussed with marked enthusiasm.

Senses of Lower Animals.

Most animals, such as the fox, the wolf and the rabbit, find their way back to their lairs by a combination of sight, memory and smell. The fox could smell his way home if he were suddenly struck blind.

Detecting the Chinese.
Two men have just been convicted of smuggling Chinamen into the country. The detectives adopted a plan marvelous in its simplicity and effectiveness. They wanted to be sure whether the four Celestials in question had ever been in the country before. They were dressed in American fashion and the detectives took the coats off the men and required them to put them on again. They put them on backward.

Blame Mountain Railroads.
The Swiss peasants are of the opinion that the constant shrinkage of the Alpine glaciers is due to the building of mountain railroads.

Ever Subject to Tender Passion.
Woman is too soft to hate permanently. Even if a hundred men have been a grief to her, she will still love the hundred and first.—Johann Gottfried Kinkel.
