Thousands of Carloads of the Fruit Being Shipped. Southeastern Nebraska is shipping the finest apples that ever grew into the eastern markets. A Nebraska daily recently said: 'Slice off the southeastern corner of Nebraska, transport it to the Pacific or the South Atlantic coast, leave its soil, climate and people the same and put land boomers at work for that particular fruit growing section, and the people would invest their hard-earned dollars in this land, believing a new found paradise was within their grasp.'

NEBRASKA APPLE LAND

We do not need land boomers in Nebraska, but we do need to know the possibilities of this great state. For over a hundred miles along the Missouri river is the finest apple land on earth at prices ridiculously low. Peter Youngers, the pioneer horticulturist of Fillmore county, is shipping a carload of apples a day until his crop is marketed. From a twenty-acre orchard he is marketing ten thousand bushels. He has one orchard which produced a net income of $200 per acre at eight years, and $312 per acre when ten years old.

At Blue Hill, Jesse W. McCoy has 1,500 bushels of apples on one and one-half acres. A land boomer from Utah tried to sell him some irrigated land for $1,700 an acre, but Mr. McCoy did not buy.

At Arlington is another orchard of eight acres which has produced 21,050 bushels of apples in twelve crops, and the Henry C. Smith orchard of sixty-five acres, in Richardson county, shipped forty-five carloads of apples last year. This land cost ten dollars an acre twenty years ago and is now valued at $3,000 per acre.

HOT WATER WILL RUIN LACE

Should Not Be More Than Tepid, and the Delicate Fabric Must Never Be Rubbed.

Persons who know nothing of the care of fine laces are often driven to distraction when they try to find out, owing to the conflicting character of the rules laid down. Here are some words of wisdom from the mouth of a woman who has inherited a lot of old lace, which she launders herself when necessary. 'Boiling water, which I saw recommended in a recent article on the subject, should never be used,' she says emphatically. 'It would ruin anything but imitation lace, and even that would shrink to a tracing if subjected to such treatment. Boiling water also sets the dirt in a delicate fabric. If lace is to be made clean without injury to itself, tepid water must be used, and the soap must never be rubbed directly upon it. A suds of pure soap and tepid water is what agrees with it best, and in that the lace should soak all night. No rubbing is one of the rules.'

'In the morning the lace should be lifted into a new hair sieve and lukewarm water poured over it until it runs clear. If it still looks soiled, soak it again in suds and pinch gently with a sideways motion and soaped fingers the spot where the dirt or stain is. When all the dirt is soaked out, rinse in bluing water unless a very creamy tint is desired, in which case very warm, but not boiling water, to which a little clear tea or coffee has been added, should be used for the final rinsing. 'Some persons prefer the tea tint to that given by coffee, and, in addition, there is no odor. It is best to try a piece of linen in the tinted water before putting in the lace, for as the wet linen is colored so will the lace be when it is dry. 'Before drying the lace wrap it in a piece of old cotton cloth and squeeze hard, otherwise when it is hung to dry the color will be deepest at the edge where it drips. The best way to dry it, however, is to pin it flat on an old counterpane and lay it on a table, so that it may be smoothed by hand from time to time.'
