PASSED WEBB BILL

HOUSE VOTES TO KEEP PROHIBITION STATES DRY.

POISONED FROM PURE FOOD

Chicago University Girls Poisoned at Pure Food Dinner—President Elect Preparing First Message.

Washington.—The Webb bill to prohibit the interstate shipment of liquor into dry states for purposes of sale, "or in any manner used" in violation of the state laws was passed by the house Saturday, 240 to 65.

The passage of the bill ended one of the most stubbornly fought all-day contests of this congress. Senator Kenyon of Iowa, author of a senate measure of the same general purport, sat in the house all day watching the fight, which opened with a contest over the rule to bring up the Webb bill.

At Work on Inaugural Message. Princeton, N. J.—President-elect Wilson has completed the first draft of his inaugural address. He acted as his own stenographer in producing the document.

Favored Direct Election. The house went on record as favoring direct election of senators and recommended H. R. 166, the bill for the ratification of this amendment to the federal constitution, for third reading.

The efficiency committee of the senate will report shortly a plan for the alteration of the state capitol building, which is looked to dissipate capitol removal and new capitol talk for several years to come.

The state-wide Nebraska plan will be made with no individual membership, but each county as rapidly as organized will be affiliated and represented by the president on the State Advisory Committee.

Six hundred and seventy counties in all parts of the United States have undertaken this work, and 193 county associations have already been incorporated and have employed county agents under this plan.

FEED THEIR SOLDIERS POORLY

European Nations the Reverse of Liberal to Their Defenders, at Least in Times of Peace.

Wellington said that "our battles are won on the playing fields of Eton," but modern military commanders are inclined to believe that the soldier fights "on his stomach."

Of all European soldiers Tommy Atkins is the best fed. The continental soldier never gets a meal to be compared to the hot joint, vegetables, pudding, cheese and beer enjoyed by our men, says Stray Stories.

In France the soldier gets a cup of black coffee on rising. He has to work on an empty stomach till noon, when he gets a pound of bread (his day's allowance), and hashed mutton or beef, with potatoes. His drink is water, unless he has money to buy wine.

At 5 o'clock he has a second meal, consisting of boiled beef and bread. He gets nothing more till morning coffee on the following day.

The German soldier fares even worse. Coffee at 5 a. m., stewed meat, potatoes and bread at noon and a plate of soup at night are considered to be enough for Hans. As a matter of fact, many soldiers receive either money or food from their parents, as the rations are clearly inadequate.

The Swedish soldier is not badly fed. He has a good breakfast, consisting of coffee, bread and butter, pickled fish and potatoes. He dines at 2 o'clock and is entitled to a plate of soup, vegetables, roast meat or bacon. Supper at 8, which consists of a plate of soup, finishes the day.

The Austrian soldier fares no better than his German comrade, except when he is on active service. Then he has two solid meals a day instead of one.

The Italian soldier is about the worst fed of all. In time of peace he is practically a vegetarian. He gets meat regularly when he is fighting, otherwise macaroni and similar foods constitute his "ordinary."

The Russian is not much better off as regards food, but may drink either beer or tea. He has two meals a day: dinner, composed of gruel or cabbage soup, and a piece of beef or fish. For supper he gets only a plate of beef soup.

Thirteen the Lucky Number. That 13 was a lucky number for the Americans in the war of the revolution, when 13 colonies revolted and formed the United States, was recognized by a London newspaper of 1776. It asserted that the "rebels" considered the number lucky, and attributed to a party of returned naval prisoners the mocking statement that "13 dried clams were a rebel's daily ration; that Washington had 13 toes and 13 teeth in each jaw; that the regular rebel family comprised 13 children.
