SUBDUING OF PHILADA

BY CLARA HAENCHEN.

"I have sent for you to draw up a new will," concluded Miss Asbury, seating herself and motioning her companion to do likewise. "I heard it rumored—" ventured the lawyer. "That I intended disinheriting Philada as too frivolous to be trusted with the Asbury estate?" she smiled. "And I did not contradict the rumor. As Philada's aunt, and only living relative, I can hardly say I have had an easy time of it since becoming her guardian, five years ago." "Philada is a dear—when she has her own way. I soon realized my lack of control and therefore wished to see her safely married. I must admit it wasn't for lack of opportunity. But young men came, admired, and were sent away until I was completely out of patience. Philada had refused, or was at outs, with every eligible man in town and time was hanging rather heavily on her hands when it was announced that Larry Drummond, who has made quite a name for himself abroad as an artist, was to spend the summer at the old home-stand."

"Well, they met at a garden party. He didn't call the next day, as she expected, nor the next week, which rather surprised her, but she didn't say anything. Then he began dropping in casual like, but as far as I could see there was no love making. "One afternoon I left them in the music room trying over some songs, and taking a book I went out into the arbor. I must have dozed, for the first thing I heard was a slight thump and Larry's voice saying: 'There, now, I want to talk seriously with you for a moment.'"

"Help me down this instant," imperatively demanded Philada. "You look very graceful up there," he replied, lazily. "I rose to leave the arbor, but sank back at the sight that met my eyes. For there was Philada perched upon the high pedestal, from which the storm had blown the fern the night before, and on the grass facing her sat Larry. Larry is six feet three and no doubt had tossed her up as he would a child. "Help me down," she commanded. "I must return to my studio next month. I have been thinking the matter over, and concluded I should like to take you back with me as my wife," he continued, not heeding her. "For a moment she was speechless. "No doubt you would," she replied, sarcastically.

"That would give you a month to get ready. I loved you the first time I saw you, but after hearing how you treated the other boys, I determined to make sure of a winning game. I know you love me—"

"Such audacity! This looks like it," she taunted. "You were too proud to show it when you thought I didn't care," he went on relentlessly. "How does Wednesday appeal to you as a wedding day?"

"It doesn't appeal to me at all, and if you don't help me down immediately—I'll jump!"

"Oh, I wouldn't do that," he advised soothingly. "You might sprain your ankle and that would delay our wedding journey. Where shall we spend our honeymoon?"

"Such assurance I never heard! I will jump," she cried angrily. "Give me your promise, dear, and I'll lift you down. There is a man coming. Promise," he cried, rising and standing in front of her.

"I won't," protested Philada tearfully. "You're a brute."

"He is almost here. It's the handsome minister. Quick!" he commanded.

"Philada gave one glance backward. 'Take me down,' she wailed, 'but I'll—' "He had her in his arms and closed her lips with a kiss just as the scandalized minister reached them.

"Oh, Mr. Burnham, you're just the man we want to see," exclaimed Larry joyfully. "Miss Asbury has promised to become my wife a month from today, and we desire you to perform the ceremony."

"Only too happy, I am sure," he stammered, offering his congratulations.

"Philada opened her lips to protest, but the humor of the situation overcame her anger, and that's why I want to change my will leaving half of the estate to Philada and half to her husband, for the man capable of subduing her so diplomatically has my sincere admiration."

In Advocacy of Kindness.

"Deal gently with the old, for they will come a long way; and be kind to the young, for they have a long journey before them."—Selected.

What She Saw in Him.

"You must have seen some trait in me to admire," said Mr. Meekton, "or you wouldn't have married me." "I did," replied his wife; "your sublime nerve in wanting to be my husband."

Wily Weeber.

Ardent Suitor—"I lay my fortune at your feet," Fair Lady—"Your fortune! I didn't know you had one." Ardent Suitor—"Well, it isn't much of a fortune, but it will look large beside those of my feet."—Boston Transcript.

Firecrackers.

In order to prevent accident and injury on July 4, 1913, the city council passed a resolution prohibiting the use of firecrackers on 4th avenue between Seward and Elm Street and on Webster street between 3rd and 5th avenue on said date. This rule will be strictly enforced.

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The relative percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

Bread made with
Royal Cream of Tartar Powder:

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with phosphate powder:

68 1/4 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67 3/4 Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.
