This Government Won't Put Its Money

In a bank that does not guarantee it against loss. Why Should You?

The United States will not deposit a dollar in a National Bank, on any other bank, unless the bank furnishes a bond for twice the amount deposited.

The United States Government can at any time make an investigation of any National Bank and learn all about its resources. But still the Government demands a guarantee for its deposits—why shouldn't YOU have protection.

Your deposits in this bank are protected by the State Guaranty Law—no matter what happens YOU CAN'T LOSE!

Teachers to Hear Great Men Discuss School Topics

Rarely has such a program been prepared as that which will be offered to the members of the Nebraska State Teachers Association, which meets in Omaha, November 5, 6, and 7. Former programs have been featured by high class men but this year the executive committee has gone itself one better and secured the best talent obtainable.

The speakers' list includes Dr. Nathaniel Butler of Chicago University; Hon. O. T. Carson, former superintendent of instruction of Ohio; Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, president of Amherst College; Prof. E. R. Hedrick, of the University of Missouri; Chancellor Samuel Avery of Nebraska University; Prof. T. P. Giddings of Minneapolis; Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, New York City president National Woman's Suffrage Association; and Miss Katherine Blake, New York public schools.

These eminent educators, prominent in various lines of educational endeavor, will discuss topics vital to the schools of the United States. With such an array of talent, the banner attendance in the history of the association is anticipated, although high water marks have been set the last two years, when the meetings were held in Omaha.

Boards of Education throughout the state are granting holidays and leaves of absence to the teachers, showing that the Nebraska Association is appreciated as one which does its membership a world of good.

With the application of the referendum principle the teachers of the state are taking a keen interest in the affairs of the organization which characterizes it as one of the liveliest organizations of teachers in the country.

The Berry Acreages

In Nebraska there were 2,777 acres devoted to the growing of strawberries in 1913. Doubtless the acreage is much larger as the estimate does not include many of the extremely small patches but is made up of the acreages of the larger commercial ventures. Fruit growers have planted 1,483 acres in blackberries while 720 acres are in raspberries. These figures were compiled by the state board of agriculture and are the first tabulations made on the berry crops.

The Case Of Wm. Galbraith

Perhaps the injustice of law and the inefficiency of our social organization were never more harshly exhibited than in the sentence of William Galbraith at the last term of court. No censure is implied of Judge Dungan, who felt obliged to pronounce the sentence. It was only after the maturest deliberation and a sympathetic regard for the prisoner that he applied the severity of the law to the misconduct of the unfortunate man before him. Had there seemed any escape the judge would gladly have avoided the duty enjoined upon him.

Galbraith and another were arrested something over a year ago for burglarizing a rail road car. They had been drinking, and learning that there was some beer in the car, they either opened the car, or found it open, and took out some of the beer. The car being opened, Galbraith took also some flour and some other articles of small value. Had it not been for the technical breaking of which, it is probable, the men could not have been convicted, the offense would have been petty larceny.

The men had no money. They were advised to plead guilty, and throw themselves upon the mercy of the court, which had power to suspend their sentence and parole them on good behavior. The Rev. Cole, Mr. Ed. Overing and others interested themselves in their behalf. The men did fairly well during their parole. One of them made good, quit drinking, and became an industrious and respectable citizen. Galbraith did himself credit most of the time. His earnings were paid over to Mr. Overing, who saw that they went to the support of his family.

Once or twice temptation to drink got the better of him. And he was subject to peculiar temptations. He reported to the court at each term according to the terms of his parole, and also confessed his short comings, receiving with good grace a lecture from the court, a lecture which the court felt obliged to enforce with threats of commitment to the penitentiary should his drunkenness be repeated.

It was repeated, and on the first day of the last term of court, the poor fellow jumped his bail. His comrade was released from farther attendance upon court, but Galbraith was ordered to be arrested when found. There seemed nothing for the court to do but to impose the sentence of the law.

Galbraith was thus sent to the penitentiary, because he was too weak to withstand the temptation to drink. The whole amount of liquor consumed by him during the year probably was less than five dollars worth. But it was enough to intoxicate him on several occasions.

His case is simply that of a man too weak to struggle with the desire for alcoholic drinks, too weak to run himself without help, to manage his own affairs. He needed a guardian, one who would set him at work, keep him at work, and manage his finances. He needed the active help and sympathy of all good people.

It is not to criticize that we now call attention to this want of Christian sympathy, if such sympathy were lacking. It is rather in the hope that something may yet be done. It lies with the Christian people of this city to make the stay of Galbraith in the jail a wholesome, reforming fact in his life. Kindly letters once or twice a week will suffice to prove to him that the church people of this vicinity are remembering him with hopeful interest; that they are giving him of their affection and care; that they are surrounding him with their best wishes. It is in their power to make the atmosphere of the penitentiary an atmosphere of healing and good. Will they do it?

Mr. and Mrs. Will E. Bailey are spending this week visiting relatives at Walnut, Iowa.

Stranger Works Bunco Game

A young man, visiting relatives near Inavale, appeared in this city one day the latter part of the week and endeavored to work a little flim flam game, but it was nipped in the bud. He appeared, early in the morning, at one of the local thirst parlors, where he purchased several "rounds," and repeated this performance at regular intervals until near the noon hour. At this time, finding that the proprietor had left for lunch, and the place in charge of the bartender, he told the latter that he had ordered a case of beer from the former, but had changed his mind and would take a quart of whiskey and the rest of his money back. The bartender, realizing this was Red Cloud, where they do not deal in gold bricks, but all live up to a high moral standard, never suspected anything could be wrong, and as a consequence complied with his request.

However, on the return of the proprietor from his noon day meal, he was told of the transaction, and it immediately became clear that they had been "worked."

Marshal Christy was summoned, the story was told him, whereupon the faithful Marshal donned his sleuth like attire, and in a very short space of time located his man at the depot, where he was waiting for a west bound train. The gentleman was taken into custody, after which he appeared before "His Honor" and in order to secure his final release was compelled to part with considerable more of the where-with-all than would have been necessary had he purchased outright enough "joy water" to have lasted him several weeks.

Cut Glass Costs Money

SURE IT DOES

And the better it is the more it costs—just like everything else.

But cut glass is bought mainly for its beauty anyway—and you can't get beauty without paying for it.

But that needn't frighten any lover of cut glass away from our store.

To tell you that ours is moderately priced, doesn't explain anything for you.

To tell you that we have just opened a new, clean stock does not let you know the beauty of our glass, nor can you appreciate the beauty of our new silver deposit ware till you see it.

So we guess you'll just have to drop in and see for yourself.

Will you?
