

WAR REMINISCENCES

FAMOUS CHARGE OF PICKETT

Gray-Cloth Soldier Could Have Taken Life of Union Man Who Was Making Observation.

Nothing but a stone fence and a narrow margin of cornfield separated me from their famous charge.

I was not far from the north fence, which ran east and west. Pickett's troops in their charge moved to the west, on the other side of this fence, near where I was placed.

Our flags were always the same, but the confederates in battles and charges carried red flags, not used except in action, writes Henry M. Matthews in the Chicago Record-Herald.

That night I was posted near the fence before mentioned, where I could hear the prayers, curses and appeals for water of the wounded, whom in trying to relieve, our details and ambulance men were fired upon by the enemy.

The next morning I walked among the fallen Confederates, mostly dead, but something of what I saw and a conversation which I had with a wounded Louisianian would lengthen this communication too far beyond the limits of the statement you requested.

After the repulse of the grand charge upon our center that afternoon the skirmishers in our front were not withdrawn, but I believe were reinforced.

The ground was crowning, rising in a gentle ridge, with gradual sloping sides between us and them. When not firing we generally lay on the ground ready to get up and use our arms as occasion required.

"Well," said the colonel, "lead me to the head niggah. I have $5 yere fo' him. I want good service while I'm yere."

"Oh, yes, sah; yes, sah; ah'm de head niggah."

Corsage Rose Sets Off the Costume.

WITH soft lace drapery which forms their bodices, gowns for evening or for afternoon functions are completed by draped skirts meeting the bodice with a girde or sash.

But whatever the finish at the waist line, for these gowns for high occasions, the splendid corsage rose is rarely left out.

Such a rose is posed at the front of the gown, usually a little toward the left side and just under the bust. It is a splendid factor in the costume; it is in fact "featured," given the star part in the composition of the picture.

The roses of satin or velvet are made in all the fashionable new colors. Certain yellow and strong light green shades, also deep orange and black, have been favorites.

A wire provides the stem. A little ball of cotton is wound about one end, the size of a thimble, and over this a bit of ribbon is placed and fastened to the stem by winding it with a thread or tie-wire.

After the center has been made in this way, the petals are made. Each short length is doubled and plaited in at the raw edges. The platts are sewed down. After the petals—say ten or eleven in all—have been made, they are fastened about the center of the rose already formed, tied to the stem with thread or tie-wire.

These roses made of velvet ribbon about two inches wide in a deep gold color are mounted with velvet foliage.

Besides satin and velvet ribbon the heavier gauze ribbons are used, and the gold and silver tissue. Roses of this sort are expensive bits of luxury when bought ready made—from about two to five dollars each.

For less dress-up times, the little rosegay of rosebuds made of several different colors of narrow satin ribbon, is still a great favorite.

AFTERNOON GOWN A TRIUMPH OF FRENCH DESIGN

HERE is an unusual and attractive gown from the salon of a notable French designer. It has the grace of simplicity and it embodies several of the best style features of the present season.

Just as I did so I saw a little beyond the crest of the rising ground—near a tree—a gray-clad soldier, straightening up also. He was investigating from his side the same as I was from ours.

"Ah you th' head niggah in this yere hotel?"

skirt a little shorter at the front than at the back and hanging in about the feet.

It is not always easy to solve the intricacies in construction of the most simple looking of French gowns. It is quite likely that this one is made in two pieces, with the skirt and chiffon bodice attached to a short under waist. The skirt overlaps at the front.

The tunic is apparently fastened at the left side and attached to the bodice. The girde is boned and is of soft satin, lined in irregular pleats. Girdeles are, almost without exception, made in colors contrasting with that used in the body of the gown.

The study of a gown of as great artistic value as this one should involve that of the dressing of the feet and the arrangement of the coiffure, because both these matters should enter into the consideration of a dressy costume at any time.

In cutting a gown of this character wide goods are more easily managed than narrow. Skirts, overlapping at the front, while narrow, give room for easy walking because the front seam is not joined down to the bottom.

PLEASANT FOR MISS SMITH

Of Course Harvard Man May Not Have Meant Anything, But Then Again.

There is a man in this town who knows a good story with which to begin an after-dinner speech. He has saved it for two years, and has not had a chance to use it.

A Harvard graduate student went to Chicago to pursue his studies. At one session of the class he attended the first speaker was a Chicago woman, a doctor of philosophy, severe and plain, but learned.

"The discussion offers room for endless discussion," he began. Then he bethought him of chivalry, "but really when my learned colleague, Miss Smith, rose to her feet, it seemed that the ground was covered."

SCALP ITCHED AND BURNED

Greenwood, Ind.—"First my hair began to fall, then my scalp itched and burned when I became warm. I had pimples on my scalp; my hair was falling out gradually until I had scarcely any hair on my head."

"For several years I was bothered with pimples on my face. Some of them were hard red spots, some were full of matter, and many blackheads. I was always picking at them and caused them to be sore."

"I tried massage creams for my face and all kinds of hair tonic and home-made remedies, but they only made things worse. Nothing did the work until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I washed my face with the Cuticura Soap, then put plenty of Cuticura Ointment on. Three months' use of Cuticura Soap and Ointment has made my face as smooth and clean as can be."

Two Years Has a Great Idea. It had been a hard afternoon for Joseph. His mother had taken him downtown shopping with her, and as they were crossing Gladstone boulevard on the way home his little feet began to lag.

"Carry me, mamma," he said. "But I can't, Joseph," she said. "Don't you see mamma has her bundles and her pocketbook to carry? It's only a little piece now."

Joseph trudged a bit farther and then he had an idea. "You put your pocketbook and bundles down and let them walk," he said. "Then you can carry me!" so she found room him him.—Kansas City Star.

What So Precious As a Healthy Baby?

Every Youngster Can Have Fine Digestion if Given a Good Baby Laxative.

In spite of the greatest personal care and the most intelligent attention to diet, babies and children will become constipated, and it is a fact that constipation and indigestion have wrecked many a young life.

But, as we cannot all have perfect working bowels, we must do the next best thing and acquire them, or train them to become healthy. This can be done by the use of a laxative-remedy very highly recommended by a great many mothers.

Thousands can testify to its merits in constipation, indigestion, biliousness, sick headaches, etc., among their reliable people like Mrs. James R. Rouse, of Marinette, Wis. Her little son Howard was fifteen months old last April, but he was sick with bowled trouble from birth and suffered intensely. Since Mrs. Rouse has been giving him Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin all trouble has disappeared and the boy is becoming robust.

Thousands keep Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin constantly in the house, for every member of the family can use it from infancy to old age. The users of Syrup Pepsin have learned to avoid cathartics, salts, mineral waters, pills and other harsh remedies for they do but temporary good and are a shock to any delicate system.

400,000 Settlers a Year

Immigration figures show that the population of Canada increased during 1911, by the addition of 400,000 new settlers from the United States and Europe. Most of these have gone on farms in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Lord William Percy, an English nobleman, says: "The possibilities and opportunities offered by the Canadian West are so infinitely greater than those which exist in England, that it seems absurd to think that people should be impeded from coming to the country where they can most easily and certainly improve their position."

New districts are being opened up, which will make accessible a great number of homesteads in districts especially adapted to mixed farming and grain raising.
