FIRE
THE ALARM is a dreadful thing for the man without insurance. Every time he sees the engines racing along his heart comes up in his throat if the fire is anywhere near his place. What folly, what mistaken economy.

THE COST OF INSURANCE is so small that it need hardly be considered. The freedom from worry alone is worth it many times over. Have us insure you to-day.

Frame Construction Is Most Preferable

for home building not only on account of its economy, but because of its adaptability to changing conditions. Homes built of wood are easily moved from one location to another; they can be altered or enlarged without injuring their general appearance for the reason that painting will make the old look as good as the new. Instead of painting being considered an expense it should really be held as an improvement because it freshens up the whole appearance of your home, and instead of ultimate decay and deteriorated value as is the case with substitutes that can only be renovated by building a whole new house, your home becomes constantly more valuable. This is only one of the little things to consider when building a home. "Little drops of water, etc., make a mighty ocean." Come in and we'll tell you more about lumber.

SLEEPING CARS IN AFRICA.

They Are Not Too Clean and the Conductor Makes the Beds.

Describing railroad travel in South Africa, E. W. Howe in his Monthly says:

"Soon after the train conductor looked at our tickets he proceeded to lug two huge bags of bed clothing into our compartment and make up two beds. We paid $1.20 for the use of the bed clothing two nights; the charge would have been the same for one night. So that we will have a large compartment to ourselves two nights and a day and pay only $1.20 above the regular fare. The beds were comfortable, though somewhat narrow, but we slept as well. I imagine, as people usually do on a sleeping car. On our door and on our window were placards announcing that the compartment was reserved, and we were not disturbed during the journey. When this reservation placard is not displayed any one has a right to a seat or bed in a compartment that is not full.

"The South African sleeping cars are not at all bad, except that the train conductor has so much to do that he cannot keep them as clean as they should be. The conductor did not polish my shoes at night, but I knew he was very busy and overlooked his neglect.

"I wish the haughty conductors of American passenger trains could see our conductor with his coat off, making up beds. I wish they could also see our tickets, which cover nearly 3,000 miles of travel and read from Durban to Victoria Falls and back to Belra. I am unable to understand them, but the conductors have no difficulty.

"On one or two trains we have been on there was a man who helped the conductor, but on at least two crowded trains on which we traveled the conductor has had no help whatever in making up the beds; the most curious thing I have ever noted in railroad travel. There is a guard on the train, who is what we call a brakeman, but he does not assist the conductor in the chamber work. When these conductors are taking the tickets they are as haughty as are American conductors, but when they begin lugging in sheets and pillows and mattresses they are as humble as the most timid traveler could wish."

KEYS AS THEY TURN.

Most of Them Unlock by Twisting Them to the Right.

"You would be amazed," said Professor Lookabout informally, as he started to unlock his desk in preparation for the morning's classwork, "to know how many persons are unable to tell offhand which way a key turns. Only the other day, in a chat with one of the best informed men of my acquaintance, I was astonished to learn that he believed most keys turned to the left to unlock their locks. He was trying to open a typewriter desk, and he struggled with the key several moments before he made the astounding discovery that it unlocked by turning to the right.

"Why," he said to me with a surprised air, "this key works the wrong way."

"Just what do you mean by 'the wrong way?'" was my natural query. "It unlocks to the right," he replied. "So do most keys," I told him, whereupon he glanced at me skeptically. It took me several minutes to convince him that, as usual, I was right. The fact is that, whereas door keys unlock to the left perhaps as of ten as to the right, depending on which side of the door you face, the key to almost anything except a door is pretty sure to turn to the right to unfasten the lid or drawer or roller apron which it secures. A little observation is all one requires to prove the truth of this. It's one of the little things which once in a while may be well worth knowing."

And the professor absentmindedly tried to unlock his desk by turning the key to the left.—New York Times.

Simplified Spelling.

Lovers of simplified spelling should make a pilgrimage to Nevada, in Essex, where the church warden's accounts in the eighteenth century were quite delightfully phonetic. Under the date 1742 occurs the entry: "Gave Geepuk Kollins for his gal too shells and six pens. Also his close for the In-sawing yere." The mysterious word "gall" seems to signify the girl or daughter of "Geepuk Kollins." And some of us who have drunk the cup of feminine militancy to the dregs may accept gall as the right spelling.—London Mail.

Poetry and Pay.

Poetry, it is declared, is about the worst paid form of writing. That may be true, regarded from the standpoint of dollars and cents, but the man who can get a poem out of his system should feel that he is pretty well paid for his effort.—Toledo Blade.

One Use For It.

"I suppose classical music is all right in its place," said Maud. "I'm sure it is," replied Mamie. "I don't care to listen to it myself, but sometimes you have to play it in order to get a man to go home."—Washington Star.

On Occasions.

"Are you superstitious about thirteen at table?" asked Mrs. Hickenlooper. "I am when there's hardly enough food for twelve," said Mrs. Giddybody.—Magazine of Fun.

He is, in my opinion, the noblest who has raised himself by his own merit to a higher station.—Cicero.

Age of Pessimism.
"I had a talk with a pessimistic fellow the other day. I don't think I ever met any one so completely soured on the world. He told me he doubted human honesty—that he didn't believe in the faith of man, nor the constancy of woman. Life to him was all graft and greed. He was very bitter. "Your friend must have had a lot of hard experiences. How old is he?" "Nineteen."

Today.
Do not let us wait to be just or pitiful or demonstrative toward those we love until they or we are struck down by illness. . . . Life is short, and we have never too much time for gladdening the hearts of those who are traveling the dark journey with us. Oh! be swift to love, make haste to be kind!—Amiel.
