The heavy frost Tuesday night effectually ended the dreams of extra early tomatoes, potatoes, beans and a few other tender plants. The alfalfa was too far advanced to be seriously hurt by this frost.

The city cemetery is beginning to look spick and span under the efficient management of Sexton McConkey. The entire cemetery is nearly cleaned and presents a very beautiful appearance. The blue grass has covered almost all the ground and the trees and shrubbery are looking their best. Red Cloud has reason to be proud of her silent city. It is one of the best in the state, each year adds to its beauty and attractiveness. The present management had adopted a systematic method of caring for the grounds.

This morning we were shown a clipping from a Cheyenne, Wyoming, paper which states that C. B. Hale, who was recently released from jail at McCook where he had been confined for passing worthless checks, and who on being released left for the west, apparently, to grow up with the country, was again in durance vile in that city, where he is charged with obtaining $50 from a proprietor of a thirist parlor at that place, giving him in exchange a check drawn on a bank in which he has no funds.

A trip over this county will reveal the best crop conditions within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The wheat, oats, alfalfa and corn are all that mortals can wish. Perhaps never before in the history of the county has the wheat been so promising. This is partly due to the favorable weather conditions but more largely, we believe, to the improved methods of farming. Our farmers are up to the minute on the newest and best wrinkles in their business and better crops are bound to result.

Program For Coming Week

Monday and Tuesday MAY 18 and 19

The Adventures Of Kathlyn The Colonel In Chains

The beautiful Kathlyn incarcerated with her father, Col. Hare, sees little hope in prospect for escaping from the tightening coil of the snake like, villainous Umbalah, who has sworn vengeance, snarling under the bold blows of the gallant American and retreated to rally his minions for the public flogging of the Colonel and the degradation of his daughter. Suddenly the talk of father and daughter is interrupted by a noise at the close-barred window of their cell, and the friendly elephant that has aided her escape applies his great strength to a chain, pulling away the bars and part of the masonry allowing the heroine to escape.

Kathlyn, who has escaped prison through the aid of Bruce, the American hunter, sought sanctuary in her father's bungalow in the jungle. There they were Umpalah through the kindly offices of the fascinating Pundita and in a room whose door is guarded by a snarling leopard, they compel Umbalah to sign a release for Col. Hare, who was chained to a pillar in the dungeon unable to escape. Then they make their way to a distant rendezvous where they are to meet Col. Hare.

Program will include two OTHER GOOD REELS.

Wednesday and Thursday MAY 20 and 21

DOLLY OF THE DAILIES.—The new Mary Fuller pictures, with three other reels.

First Show at 8 p. m. Second at 9:30. Matinee Saturday at 3 p. m.

The fact that Nebraska can grow corn and alfalfa at less cost than almost any other state in the Union makes it possible for Nebraska to take advantage of the high price of meat. Ten years of experimental work at the Nebraska Experiment Station has proved that beef can be produced at a lower cost on some combination of the corn plant and alfalfa than any other food combination available in the state. A large amount of data have been obtained on the comparative value of cattle foods and may be had upon application for bulletins Nos. 116 and 132 of the Bulletin department, University Farm, Lincoln.

The Corset of Youthful Vitality

THE young woman of today, with her immense vitality, requires a corset allowing the greatest freedom of motion. For dancing, for vigorous outdoor pastime this is the ideal corset.

The Unrestricting J. C. C. College Girl No. 5

This is a new model made with an extremely low bust, allowing the greatest mobility, and giving the modish, uncorseted appearance. It has also the long, stylish skirt, fitting in closely. It is made of substantial material, carefully boned with long, pliable steels. Attractive, imported embroidery finishes it neatly at the bust. Priced in our corset department at the exceptionally low price of $1

We have a complete showing of J. C. C. Corsets in designs for all figures. Prices $1 to $6

The Material Value of Beauty

It used often to be remarked that "beauty is a luxury." This spirit has made the majority of American towns quite ugly. Meanwhile, as education advances and people travel, they learn that good taste is not costly. Also ugliness is often terribly expensive.

The spring is the time of much new construction. It is the season for cleaning up and beautifying towns. The time has gone by when the community as a whole views with indifference the character which new growth takes. There is a growing desire for simple lines, harmonious colors, avoidance of the monstrosities and eccentricities that one sees nearly everywhere.

When people are looking for a place for residence, the first thing they ask is to the chances for business. In perhaps even more cases it is "Is your town an attractive place to live in?" If on visiting the prospective home the streets are seen to be shabby, the buildings grotesque and illkept, it will take very good business or educational prospects to neutralize these disadvantages.

Thus beauty has its distinct commercial value. A street with trees and flowers makes every house more salable at higher prices. Other things being equal, prospective residents will pay more money to live in a town where a consistent attempt is made toward beautifying the place.

An ugly house cheapens nearby property.—Omaha Examiner.

Water Lost In Three Ways

Water in the soil may be lost in three ways. By downward percolation, by evaporation at the surface, and by use of the plants. As there is scarcely ever enough water in many parts of Nebraska to allow percolation, it need not generally concern the farmer. Evaporation, however, is a thing that can be partially controlled. Moisture comes to the surface like oil in a well. If land is cultivated, the evaporation is greatly retarded, for water moves slowly thru a loose soil. As rain is generally followed by a wind which induces evaporation, it will cultivate as soon after a rain as possible.

It also assists in destroying another factor in the loss of water, the weeds. Cultivation kills weeds which use the moisture that should be reserved for the plants. A detailed discussion of "The Storage and Use of Soil Moisture" may be secured upon application for Bulletin No. 140 of the Bulletin department, University Farm, Lincoln.

Why Not A Few Sheep?

A few sheep on the average Nebraska farm, if properly cared for, will give good financial returns. A farmer who is not familiar with sheep husbandry should start with a small flock and as his number grows his knowledge of sheep management will increase. The profits derived from the sheep business, the Nebraska College of Agriculture finds, are largely determined by the shepherd's knowledge of the industry. Sheep are sometimes called the plant scavengers of the farm. They will thrive on more kinds of weeds than will any other domestic animal. Sheep prove invaluable in cleaning weedy pastures, fence corners, and in removing brush. Sheep can always be used to good advantage in utilizing products which would otherwise go to waste, such as the scattered heads and volunteer growth in the stubble field, crab grass, and the lower leaves in the cornfield.

Why Hoe?

The loosening of the soil by cultivation so that oxygen and nitrogen may enter is necessary for the best plant growth. The normal surface soil is full of millions of bacteria which live on the vegetable matter of the soil. The bacteria cause this to decay and thus become soluble and usable for plants. If the bacteria do not get the oxygen, they die. The nitrogen is of assistance in the growing of leguminous crops, such as clover, alfalfa, peas, and beans, as well as the non-leguminous crops. In order to secure the proper amount of aeration, the Nebraska College of Agriculture advises proper drainage and cultivation. Hoeing, or other cultivation, in addition, by destroying weeds, conserves the needed moisture.

Dakota County Hires Farm Demonstrator

Dakota county farmers, who recently formed a farm management association, have hired Hugh Raymond of Norfolk, to become their farm demonstrator, effective July 1. Mr. Raymond has been identified with farming all his life. He was reared on a farm in South Dakota and lived for a number of years on a farm in Fillmore county. He also taught stock feeding and stock judging at the University School of Agriculture, Lincoln. Nebraska now has several farm demonstrators. They are located in Gage, Thurston, Seward, Merrick, Madison, Dawes and Dakota counties.
