Make it Safe for Democracy

Our greatest president set the goal stake for all in six words that should be indelibly impressed on every mind—words that cannot be too often repeated—words that will live as long as history exists.

These words will be stamped upon the guns that go over the waters, moulded into the helmets our soldier boys will wear, and be always in our soldiers' minds.

Not, however, for the soldiers alone were they spoken. They are for you, for me, for every patriotic citizen of our country.

Let us make it safe for democracy—in other words live and be democratic—broadly, liberally, sincerely. As is the home, so is the town; as is the town so is the nation—and it may be added confidently, as our nation is, so the world will be.

Furthermore, the writer was democratic before. Cleveland became president and candidly confesses to no expectation of change in sentiment. For these and other reasons, and "with malice toward none," the Chief is and will be democratic.

Purely Personal

Come among you as "a stranger within your gates" it is no more than fair you should know something of my personality, and therefore I take advantage of press privilege by having a little confidential pentalk with you. I was born at a very early age in a thriving town of Western New York "so I've been told," and came by immediate inheritance possessed of the name, Browne—spelled with an e. Soon after this my parents added Frank Livingston thereto to distinguish me from a number of Browns, of which the world was full. This inheritance I have treasured, always and if permitted will show you good people of Red Cloud that is as good now as upon the day it came to me.

My father was of a jolly, sociable disposition and well read—my mother very quiet and retiring—I take after both. So if in my desire to get acquainted and develop sincere friendships I take more time than is customary in these days of rapid-fire action, you will understand the reason therefor and not ascribe it to any lofty idea that I consider myself better than anybody else. It's heart and soul and honesty, not clothes or talk, that makes the man. Listen! I don't mind telling you—but whisper it—I started in life with actually not a stitch of clothing to my back, "so I've been told."

For many years I was busily occupied in growing up, passing through all the usual incidents and accidents of that process; acquiring knowledge, becoming a practical typographical artist, and traveling up and down and across—until my volume of experience became a large book.

These years saw me treading the sands of Florida, gazing upon the plains and mountains of Canada, dwelling in the big Empire state city of New York, living just within the Golden Gate of California, moving forward and back across country until one day I settled down in Galena, Ill., the home of Uncle Sam's great war chief and president U. S. Grant, and there met M. K. Quigley.

"Quig" was a bright youngster and strangely enough there grew up between us an attraction which, as the years fled, developed into warm and lasting friendship. The latest result of this

Making the Grade

It is a pleasure to record the marked and continued improvement of M. K. Quigley. Considering the seriousness of the case his rapid progress in recovery is little short of miraculous and reflects great credit upon those who were in charge. As an old time friend the writer may be permitted to say: "Bet your boots 'Quig' always gets up secretly."

Farmers Meeting

F. O. Boudreau of Hebron, representing the Farmers' Union of Nebraska, was here Monday evening and with the directors of the local Farmers' Union arranged for a public meeting in Red Cloud next Saturday evening, May 4th, when he will explain in detail the various points and advantages in consolidation of all Farmers' Unions. A way back in Roman times a man of note explained clearly the great force of united effort and centuries of time and experience have but strengthened his theory. The public is cordially invited to attend this assembly and it is to be hoped that all who are interested in the betterment of agricultural business and civic affairs will be present. It should be both a pleasure and a duty.

Explanatory

Being closely associated in printers work and friendship since 1898 Messrs Quigley and Browne many years ago planned to unite in the newspaper publishing business. The right opportunity did not come. Some months ago the writer proceeded to make arrangements for the long desired co-operation. This part was completed and again there was delay. Then came the unfortunate and almost fatal accident. Quick action was necessary. An imperative summons brought me here and the new deal is sprung upon the friends and patrons of the Chief at almost a moments notice. It is my sincere hope that I may make myself as good a place in this community as my friend Quigley holds; it is my earnest purpose to give you the best fruits of such knowledge and experience as years have given me, and together I trust that Mr. Quigley and myself may win and merit your high esteem and friendship.
