Don't forget to write it 1919.

There is one date in each month of this year that offers a combination of figures which will not occur again until the next century-the nineteenth.

"With best wishes for your health and happiness" (we quote from the Advertiser) appeals to the humorous side when associated with the business of undertaking.

The last hope of Germany is to create disactishin in the Peace Conference. And reading re-ports of what is doing at Wash maon one diclines to think ome of our Republican friend bent upon aiding the curry.

Ring out the old, ring in the new. If there are regrets over the past, forget them. If there are fears for the future, put them away. Yesterday is but a memory. Tomorrow never comes. The duties of today well done will care for both.

Sometimes one becomes doubtful as to the progress of the world in general. There are people whose grasp of a new idea is so slender that really they hav'nt got it. And when the idea is so simple that a child might readily understand, one inclines toward discouragement on finding intelligent adults obtuse. All of which is prompted by the fact that a nicely dressed apparently intelligent business caller pat in our box of sample printed matter. But we extend for-giveness. He paid up his subscription, while we kept silent and smiled.

Really, Mr. Smith, you know last week was a day short, owing to customary observance of the 25th and in rushing our work ahead perhaps we did take undue advantage of the grey matter reposing serenely beneath your hat. # An Event Crowded with Great Values

ERE are values that may not again be possible for many seasons to come. We could, selfishly, let prices stand, and, with market conditions continuing, they might later be even better values than today.

But the lines are broken. Many models will not be made again. Many of the cloths cannot be obtained next year. It would, besides, be unprofitable for us to keep our money tied up-we need it to put again into other quick-moving merchandise.

Duly Honored

Probably there never has been or ever will be a man more widly known or highly honored than President Wilson. Men who reach such heights are natural targets for the jealous, the envious, and the wouldbe critics, and President Wilson is no exception to the rule. But he goes his journey, meets his obligations, does his duty regardless of those who alternatey snap and fawn.

Perhaps no better recital of his mission and welcome overseas will be written than the ing church and being invited to and the greatness of your achievefollowing report of his attendthe pulpit at Carlisle, Eng., the girlhood home of his mother:-

I remember these divine ideals to the entrance and, remembering him, I can see how what he required of me and remember the stern lesson of duty he spoke. And I gremember painfully about things that he expected me to know that I did not know.
