Chas. E. McPherson, one of the "war horses" of the promoters is busy collecting the Rep. City quota, which will go to meet the expense of marking and routing the trail—Harlan County Ranger.

Some of the Red Cloud editors have a happy faculty for throwing out a number of Dark Hints about the other fellow. Hints are always unsatisfactory. They leave such funny ideas in a reader's head. Now, for instance, after reading the hinting remarks of those editors about each other, we find that we are unable to decide whether the Red Cloud papers are edited by pole cats or horse thieves. A little ventilation would help—or try Tanlac.—Franklin County Tribune.
THE LYRE, from an unreliable source, learns with pleasure that its old and highly esteemed friend, C. E. Matthews, formerly owner and proprietor of the Riverton Review, is now owner and "big chief" of The Blue Hill Leader, publication founded in July, 1887 by The Scorpion, and which, in its inception was intensely American as well as being thoroughly Democratic. The people of Blue Hill and vicinity are to be congratulated because of the change, if true, as they can be assured of a snappy publication under the supervision of Col. Matthews.—Shields' Tamora Lyre.

"BARNEY" McENY of Red Cloud, one of the most popular and successful attorneys in Nebraska, was designated by the late Tom Auld, before death, after his death, to settle up the affairs of his estate, which is approximately in the neighborhood of one million dollars. In the selection of Mr. McNeny, Mr. Auld, banker and capitalist, made a wise choice, as every assurance is evident that the matter has been entrusted to the care of competency and safety. It is with a feeling of profound pleasure that I have watched Mr. McNeny grow from a struggling young pettifogger to one of the leading barristers of the state, and he has no one to thank for his success but himself. His slogan, "keep everlastingly at it with a determination to win," has won, and his many friends rejoice that he has mastered the problem of his early youth—when life held nothing in store except rank promises.—Shields' Tamora Lyre.

Dig out dandelions, rake over the lawns, burn up the rubbish. The P. E. O. ladies are requesting it.

High Grade seed potatoes are one of the first essentials to successful potato growing, says the Nebraska College of Agriculture. High yielding seed that will produce potatoes of the best quality is as important to the potato grower as high class breeding animals are to the successful modern live-stock man. Money and time spent in obtaining good seed will be amply repaid when digging time comes. Seed potatoes are treated with corrosive sublimate to control and prevent scab, etc. The standard solution is: 4 ounces corrosive sublimate (mercuric bichloride) dissolved in a few gallons of hot water and diluted to a total of 20 gallons of solution. The standard length of treatment is: 1 hour for the first time the solution is used; 1 1/4 hours for the second time the solution is used; 1 1/2 hours for the third and fourth time the solution is used. Non-metal vessels must be used.
