Origin of "Yankee."

It is said the term "Yankee" originated with the Indians when they were in alliance with the French colonists against the English. They were unable to pronounce the French words "Les Anglais" and pronounced the words "Yankee" which gradually took the form of "Yankee." When the English abandoned the country the Indians made no distinction between the former colonists and the English themselves, and the term clung to the Americans.

PROSPERITY WAITS ON LOAN.

When Government Pays Contracts and Allows Factories to Resume Peace Will Be Real

The peace we have won must be financed, just as the war had to be financed. War contracts were made by the Government. Not all of them had been filled when peace came. What was the result?

Great factories had to curtail expenses when the armistice stopped their machinery. Many industries had added expenses in order to meet contract requirements. With the contracts stopped, work stopped; these industries, unless the Government promptly pays its obligations to them, will be crippled and labor will suffer. Prompt financial settlement of Government obligations will benefit labor and make an automatic readjustment of business. It will insure prosperity—and prosperity must follow peace.

What America wants now is to get back to business and forget war. It does not want to forget—nor can it afford to—its war heroes. Instead, it must create a healthful business and commercial life in which to install the returned soldiers. Such a state of business can exist only when the debts of war are paid. Peace can be real only when it is a paid-up peace. That is what the Victory Liberty Loan is for.

Every man, woman and child in Red Cloud will be economically benefited by a successful Victory Liberty Loan. Webster county has kept at the top in the past drives and must do it again.

JOTTINGS

From a War Correspondent's Notebook
By ADAM BREEDE

To those who have never been abroad, but contemplate a trip to France, a little inside information relative to the tips might not come amiss. For instance, it is customary not to give tips during the voyage, but to give them at the end of the trip.

It is considered quite the proper thing to give the steward $2.50, the bath attendant $2.50, your waiter $3, and the saloon waiter $2.50, providing you have been in the habit of indulging in refreshments.

It seems that the tip habit has not gotten thoroughly introduced throughout Ireland, and when a tip is given there it is usually very small.

But in England the habit is very much like it is here in the United States.

However, when you reach France you will have an opportunity to make up for all the tips that you happened to lose out on in England or Ireland. In France you are supposed to tip every person who performs the very slightest service for you—regardless of the fact that they receive a regular stipend for performing these duties.

For instance, you take a ride in a taxi. At the end of the journey you look at the meter and note the amount charged. Besides paying the taxi driver the full amount you are supposed to give him a tip. Should you fail to do this he will climb out of his seat and remonstrate with you in such a manner as to cause a scene in a hurry.

When you secure a meal in a cafe or hotel you are expected to add ten per cent to the amount of the bill for the waiter. Should you fail to do this he will immediately call your attention to the "oversight." Then should you fail to give the necessary ten per cent he will reject what you offer.

When the Americans landed in France it did not take them long to find this out, and it was then that they started the bad habit of giving a tip after every order of refreshments was served. This caused the French waiters to think that all Americans were millionaires. However, the American soldiers soon changed their system, as they had taken a pointer from the French—that is, they would order their refreshments, get "repeater" and not pay the bill until they were about to depart. In that way they saved an small sum, and at the same time kept in the good graces of the waiters.

Recently I received a letter in which it was said that "the writer" had been informed that most of the cities up to 150,000 inhabitants were without sewerage.

No, such is not the case. Most of the cities of that size have sewerage systems, but many of the smaller cities are not so far advanced in that respect.

In another letter this question was asked: "Is it true that the French girls have poor teeth because of the wine they drink? I have been told that they lose their teeth in their teens."

No, the French girls do not have poor teeth. On the contrary, they appear to be proud of their teeth, as they usually respond with a smile that displays an even row of "pearls."

We have heard of wine hurting the stomach, and the head, but this is the first time that we ever heard of it hurting the teeth.

The French are a thrifty people and they look upon Americans as spendthrifts. Perhaps this accounts for the excessive prices they charged the soldiers. But the Americans have nobody to blame but themselves, for they started the price-boosting shortly after their arrival. They brought it about by shoving the small change back, or leaving it on the counter.

There were many wealthy sons in the ranks, and there were many very wealthy officers—and they were the ones who were really responsible for the high prices.

Someone has said that there are as many types of young girls in the world as there are flowers. That is true, and each type has its individual beauty. So it is with the girls in France. There are all kinds of beautiful girls in France, but most of them are centered in Paris, as the capital of France seems to be the magnet that attracts beauty.

The American soldiers who have not had the opportunity to see Paris have expressed themselves as being greatly disappointed about the attractiveness of the French girls. But it must be remembered that they have not had the opportunity to see many of the French fair sex, consequently their judgment is based entirely upon the few maidens they did see.

There are plenty of beautiful French girls, and they certainly do have most charming manners.

There are the brunette girls with the big, brown, dreamy eyes and an olive complexion. Then there are the golden-haired maids with the light-blue, self-conscious eyes. And there are plenty of the other kinds. But, take them as a whole, the French girls are fair to look upon—even if the roses on their cheeks are of the hand-painted kind.

Deep Sea Creatures.
An interesting little creature of the deep is the lancelet. It ranks about halfway between a fish and an invertebrate. Among its many peculiarities is the absence of a distinct head. The mouth is in the middle of the body, and is surrounded by tentacles. At great depths shrimps have been found that have luminous bodies. When put into the aquarium, they lose their light-giving properties. Scientists believe the Creator made these creatures luminous to give them light in the dark depths of the sea.
