"Daphne! Daphne!"

She was more afraid of him now than ever. All the splendors he could promise her were nothing to that proffer of his longing.

While she waited in a battle of imresolution. "I apologize," he mumbled, bless my soul, ain't you Tom Duane?" "I'm a fool to think that you could love me."

Suddenly she remembered Wetherell and his massages to Leila. She felt so renewedly virtuous herself that it seemed her duty to go down and rebuke Lella for her apparent philandering at Newport. She was also curious to see how guilty Leila would receive the news that Wetherell had Lella dismissed the boy with a faint-hearted show of indignation. Then she came back and said, "And now we have no meat to eat.'

Bayard was reduced to philosophy, the last resort of the desperate: Well, the vegetarians say we ought never to eat meat, anyway. They sat down to a pitiful mealmeatless, maidless, mirthless-hardly more than the raw turnips and cold water of Colonel Sellers. Lella fetched what victual there was.

After the meal Bayard shrugged into his overcoat and left without kissing his wife or his sister goodby.

Daphne and Lella went out to the kitchen, set the dishes in the pan, and the pan under the faucet. Lella turned on the hot water. Daphne was glad to be at work.

"There's one good thing about a small meal," she chirped, "It makes less dishes to wash." Then, with as much trepidation as if she had been the accused instead of the accuser she your attentions elsewhere." faltered: "Oh, say, Lella, do you remember a man named Wetherell?"

Lella dropped a plate. She said it was hot. But other plates had been "Wetherell?" she pon-

"Very." "Oh, yes. He was at Newport, I think. Why?"

"Oh, nothing. I met him last night "How could he?" Lella gasped. "We don't look the least alike."

"It was in the dark." "In the dark! Good heavens! Where?"

Already Lella had gained the weather gauge. Daphne had to confess her outing with Duane, the crash of the collision and the return to Yonkers in Wetherell's car. Lella took advanwith filial eagerness and her tears tage of the situation to interpolate:

"Good heavens! How could you? You of all people! And with Tom Duane! What would Clay think?"

Daphne knew that she had no right to reproach Lella for having known Wetherell in Newport. She had no right even to suspect that Lella had overstepped any of the bounds of propriety. And still she was not convinced of Leila's innocence. She was merely silenced.

CHAPTER XXI.

The next day her fears of Wetherell and of Leila were rekindled. She went down to ask Bayard to help her trace Clay. Bayard was out and Leila was on the point of leaving. She was dressed in her killingest frock and hat and generally accoutered for con-

"Aren't we grand!" Daphne cried. You look like a million dollars. Where are you off to?" "Going for a little spin."

"Who with?" Leila hesitated a moment, then nswered, with a challenging defiance: "With Mr. Wetherell. Any obection?" Daphne disapproved and felt afraid;

but when Bayard came in unexpectedly early and asked for Leila Daphne lied inevitably and said she did not know where she was She tried to be casual about it, but Bayard caught fire at once. He was already in a state of tindery irritability, and Daphne's efforts to reassure him as to Leila's innocence of any guile only angered him the more. He kept leaning out of the window and staring down into the street. Finally, espying Leila in Wetherell's car when it approached the apartment house, he dashed to the elevator and met the two at the curb. When Lella got out she was startled to see him standing at her elbow.

"Oh, it's you, dear!" she fluttered.

I want you to meet Mr. Wetherell. "Ah, really!" Wetherell exclaimed, trying to conceal his uneasiness. "This ing Mrs. Kip I met at Newport. Have freight elevator, and instructed his is a bit of luck! I've heard so much boy to send the meat up only after about you! Your wife does nothing

"Er-thanks-no, not today. I'm a trifle late to an-er-appointment." "Then I'll have a word with you here," said Bayard. "Run along, Lella; I'll join you in a minute." He said it pleasantly, but Lella was terrified. The spectacle of rival bucks locking horns in her dispute is not al-

"Mr. Wetherell, I'd thank you to pay "What's that?" Wetherell gasped at the abrupt attack.

"Your attentions to Mrs. Kip are very distasteful to me." "My dear fellow, I hope you don't imagine for one moment that- Why, your wife is the finest little girl in the world!" "That's for me to say, not you!"

"My word! this is amazing!"

"It is, indeed. It will be more than that if you come around again. Had you heard that your country was at war?"

"I had." "Well, a big, strapping fellow like you ought to be over there fighting for his country instead of looking for trouble here." Wetherell's panic at the domestic situation was forgotten in the attack on his patriotism. He drew himself up with an unconsciousiy military automatism and said, "I fancy I'm doing as much service here as I could do over there." "More, perhaps," Bayard sneered. with contemptuous irony. "But that's your business, not mine. Mrs. Kip is my business and I don't intend to have her subjected to your-your attentions. I'm trying to be neutral, but Well, I've warned you. Good day!" Bayard joined Lella in the vestibule and they went up in the elevator together. She waited till they were in their own apartment before she demanded an account of the conversa-

He told her in a rage and she flew into another. She divided her wrath between Bayard and Daphne. There was enough for both. Daphne tried to escape, but, being cornered, proceeded to fight back, whereupon Leila denounced her to Bayard and told of her ride with Duane.

It was a right good fight and getting well beyond the bounds of discretion when the telephone announced that Clay Wimburn was calling.

Nobody imaginable would have been welcome in that battlefield, but Clay seemed peculiarly ill timed. Bayard went to the telephone and called down: "Tell him we're out."

"Yes, sir." Evidently the telephone was taken from the hallman's hand, for Clay's voice roared in Bayard's ear:

"I hear you, you old villain. I know you're in, and I'm coming up. It's a matter of life and death. I'm on my way up now."

It seemed decenter that Leila and Daphne should disappear, since Bayard had said that they were all out. The women retreated to Lella's room as a good coign of audition, (TO BE CONTINUED.)

the year that thing taken from Nature to restore the vital forces.

People get sick because they go away from Nature, and the only way to get well is to go back. Something grows out of the ground in the form of vegetation to cure almost every ill.

Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found herbs and roots provided by Nature to overcome constipation, and of these he selected Mayapple, leaves of Aloe, root of Jalap, and from them made little white sugar-coated pills, that he called Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. When your intestines are stopped up, poisons and decayed matter are imprisoned in your system and these are carried by the blood through your body. Thus does your head ache, you get dizzy, you can't sleep, your skin may break out, your appetite declines you get tired and despondent. As a matter of fact, you may get sick all over. Don't you see how useless all this suffering is? All that is often needed is a dose of castor oil, or something which is more pleasant, a few of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which he has placed in almost every drug store in this country for your convenience and health. Try them by all means. They are probably the very thing you need,-right now.

Banana Consumption Big.

According to statistics for 1914, the atest available, the people of this country consumed 48,583,592,000 baianas, of which 15,000,000 bunches rame from Jamaica, 8,000,000 bunches from Honduras, 5,000,000 bunches from Costa Rica, and 5,000,000 bunches from Panama. The others came from Guatemala, Mexico, Cuba, Colombia, Nicarauga, British Honduras, Santo Domingo and Brazil.
