Red Cloud Nebraska REDCLOUD NEBRASKA

THE BLUE DRESS

By BERTHA HERMAN.

"Very well, if you are going to be as snobbish as that you can have your old ring back. Do there?" Tossing a beautiful diamond ring from her, and with a bang of the porch door May flew up the stairs to her room. There, standing before the mirror, her face aflame and her eyes wonderfully blue, she said:

"Well, I'm glad of it! I'm glad of it! To think I should have worried such a mean, unreasoning thing!"

The difficulty was the eternal lover's quarrel. Bob was going away for several weeks on a business trip to Detroit, and had asked May to cancel the betrothal affair that they had promised to attend the following week. Now that had just given May a new summer outfit, all the beautiful, soft, silly things a normal girl craves. In special evidence was her dear little blue georgette evening gown, massed in tulle, in which May looked more like an ethereal fairy than an ordinary girl. To give up the thought of wearing that dress was beyond reason!

Re-remembering! The telephone bell tinkled loudly. In an excited voice May answered the phone, thinking it possibly might be Bob. If it were, she would—no, she wouldn't—yes, she would just hang right up!

"Hello, May! Yes, this is Ida. Ida Scholl. Did you hear what the club is doing? Didn't you? Oh! We're going to have a camp. Yes, with tents in everything. Yes, out in Malmo. Sure all the girls will be there. You'll come, too? Great! Will I sign up for you? For the whole month of August. That's fine. We've only one week to wait. I'm so excited. Isn't it thrilling?"

May hung up, after receiving this news, and contemplated the result. Yes, she was glad she gave Bob back his ring. She wondered if he took it. She had flung it out on the porch. He might be too good enough to walk off and leave it there. Some impulse prompted her to run out and see if the ring were still there. Of course he took it. Well, she would go away to camp and have an exceedingly good time with the girls and forget him. He was a mean thing anyway. Possibly she might meet some other hero there. Ah, romance was stirring within her! Wouldn't it be wonderful to show Bob that she could not be trifled with!

The first of August found a happy group of effervescent youth at North station. Weren't they going out to camp, and weren't they going to have a wonderful time? One little girl in a pink linen dress and big blue eyes looked a trifle more serious than the others, but she, too, had the delightful look of expectancy on her face.

One perfectly incomparable week full of delightful experiences with canoes, cameras, campfires, gentlemen and the like had already slipped by to the regret of most of them. To May, however, it seemed as though the day were made of about 72 hours and the week of almost 120 days. Her thoughts were constantly turning homeward, and especially to the scene on her porch two weeks before. Could she steele it out, the four weeks away from home and him? Did he ever think of her? Was he going out with other girls? Should she write to him and tell him she was sorry? Oh—what was she to do!

Another week passed blinding of pleasure for Ida, Bess, Hilda and the rest, but painfully dull for May. The next evening Ida laid her hand on May's shoulder and whispered something in her ear.

"Is that true?" asked May, a new light suddenly gleam in her eyes.

"Yes, and he didn't even have to go to Detroit. He hasn't come out with anyone, not even the boys, since you left, and he feels perfectly miserable. I'd do him good, though. He will appreciate you more when you get back, although, goodness knows, you were the one who always started the quarrels."

The morning of the third week dawned bright and clear. Six o'clock they all went in for a dip. Everyone was there but May. They called for her, blew the lounge time and time again, but no May responded. Dripping wet from swimming, they all rushed into her tent, intending to awaken her and pull her down to the stream. The bed was empty, but stuck up in her mirror was a note which read:

"Girls: Don't call me a quitter. Bob is lonesome and so am I. Just had to go back. You know, May."

"They knew."

Feast Days in Seville.

Seville celebrates many feast days, but none more typically than that of Corpus Christi. Throughout Spain this churchly holiday calls for parades, but Seville finds no fete day—whether religious or secular—complete without a bull fight and dancing, and so her program includes the spectacle of the bull ring and a strange dance seen nowhere else in Spain.

The parade is the big religious event of the day. Long before it starts an excited populace crowds the line of march. Bands, balconies and windows are filled with dark Spanish señoritas and their cavaliers, dressed often than not in the unromantic garb of modern fashion. Flags and damask hangings lead to the streets a touch of carnival atmosphere, intensified by the crowd's display of finery and its loud and carefree holiday manner.

PUBLIC ROADS

ROADS REDUCE LIVING COST

Make for Prosperity More Than Any Other National Undertaking, Says Assistant Engineer.

"Good roads, more than any other national undertaking, make for the prosperity, happiness and contentment of the people," declared Col. W. P. Richardson, engineer in charge of highways in Alaska. "This is particularly evident at this time, when in every large city there is protest against the high prices of food. In my judgment, good roads, more than any other agency, will help to solve permanently the high cost of living. Transportation, of course, is at the foundation of prices. It is truthfully said that where there is inadequate transportation food prices mount high. We know that in cities prices are greatly in excess of those in rural districts and it is all a matter of transportation and distribution. If we have good roads, we can get our products to market. If we haven't, we cannot. Products on the farm are worth nothing if they cannot find a market. I am convinced that the most important governmental work is in the improvement of the roads. In this day of motor trucks it is much easier to haul products to the cities or to railroad terminals than it was a few years ago, but we must have good roads to do it. There is not the slightest doubt that good roads many times over pay for themselves. They are a fundamental economic necessity.

Good Road Over Rocky Mountains.

"The initial outlay in the building of good roads may seem large, but it is small in comparison with the benefits that accrue. In Alaska we have approximately 900 miles of improved roads, varying from the ordinary country dirt road to the best kind of macadam. In Nome there is a stretch of road over which in the summer time thousands of tons of products are hauled."

POOR ROADS ARE EXPENSIVE

Mistaken Idea That Improved Highways Are Solely for Benefit of Automobile Owners.

Poor roads are very expensive things for country communities. The farmer who thinks that improved highways are mainly for the benefit of those who drive automobiles should reflect on the results of a recent investigation by the department of agriculture, which finds that the cost of hauling farm produce over ordinary country roads is 23 cents a ton mile, whereas over hard-surfaced roads it is only 13 cents.—Youth's Companion.

OPERATION OF A ROAD DRAG

Use Pokiest, Laziest Kind of Team and Let Them Have Their Own Time—Just Keep Moving.

Do not wait for anything; build a drag and get out onto the road.

Drive very slowly. Use the pokiest, laziest team you own, and give them their time. Just so they keep moving they will be going swiftly enough. After you have used the drag a year, and have learned when to drive rapidly and when to drive slowly, you can carry a whip or drive a mettlesome team.

Vetch as Cover Crop.

An expert says that winter vetch does best as a cover crop if a little rye is seeded with it. One bushel of vetch to one-half bushel of rye per acre is about right.

Bad Habit of Cow.

Once a cow finds out she can get over an old fence there will be trouble perhaps for all time.

Rats Are Expensive.

Fifty rats on a farm will cost the owner $160 to $200 a year.

Publication of Summons.

To non-resident defendants Don E. Cloud, Maude Cloud his wife Alberta Walker, A. C. B. Walker her husband, Annie M. Cloud, Bert Chase her husband; Ralph L. Orchard, Herbert C. Orchard her husband and guardian.

You are hereby notified that William H. Cloud and Mervin C. Clark, plaintiffs, have filed a petition and complaint for partition in the district court of Webster county, Nebraska, in and to which you are named as defendants. The prayer of which is to obtain the judgment and decree of said court constraining the interests of the parties described herein to the following described land situated in Webster county, Nebraska, to wit:

The Northeast quarter (NE 1/4) of Section Twenty-seven (27), Township Two (2), Range Twelve (12).

And that the court will decree that the plaintiffs, William H. Cloud, is the owner of a homestead estate for the term of his natural life in said land and that subject thereto the parties are owners thereof as tenants in common as successors in title to Sarah L. Cloud deceased, the said William H. Cloud owning an undivided one-third interest therein and the surviving children of said Sarah L. Cloud owning each an undivided one-ninth interest therein and that said shares be confirmed and partition made of said premises sold, the homestead estate of William H. Cloud commuted and paid to him and the proceeds divided according to the interests of the parties after the payment of costs and expenses. You are required to answer the said petition on file in the office of the Clerk of said court at Red Cloud, Nebraska on or before Monday March 1, 1929.

Dated January 26, 1929.

Gives Wife Glycerine Mixture

A retired merchant whose wife suffered for years from catarrh of the stomach finally gave her simple glycerine, buckhorn bark, etc., as advised in Advertiser. ONE bottle produced great results. Because Advertiser's is in BOTH upper and lower bowel it removes all fast matter which poisoned stomach. Relieves ANY CASE—sour stomach or gas on stomach. Often cures constipation. Prevents appendicitis.—C. L. Cotting, August.
