When Love Came

***********

By ETTA VERNE LYNDON

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"I want to see you married and settled down in life before I pass away," spoke old Jared Bliss to his favorite nephew, and the latter looked startled at the suggestion.

"I shall think it over seriously, Uncle Jared," replied Ransom Bliss, but vaguely.

By a strange coincidence at almost that very hour Mrs. Walter Morse was talking over affairs with her niece, Elsie Briggs.

"I promised my sister, your mother, when she died," she said, "that you should never need a home. My husband is to represent the firm employing him in far western Canada; meanwhile what are your plans, dear?"

Elsie looked serious, but not distressed. She had been given a sensible, practical bringing up, and had already thought over the future. Mrs. Morse listened indulgently as Eisle spoke of going to the city and earning her own living.

"You two have been so good to me. 1 must not further burden you," she said. "I am sure I can carn my own way, Aunty."

Mrs. Morse grew very thoughtful. Then, after a long pause, she said: "I would like to see you married, with a good man for a husband and a home of your own," but Elsie shook her head smilingly.

Two evenings later as Eisle sat on and Elsie had been friendly acquaintances for over a year, and the latter looked puzzled and then embarrassed as Ransom, after some casual conversation, moved his chair closer towards her and said:

"I came on a special mission this evening. Elsie. It is to ask you if you will marry me."

out the least trace of affectation;

"I never expected that you-you-" you? No. True affection is too sacred * plain-spoken man. There is no womyou my wife. I will devote my life to make you happy."

Elsie sat with eyes cast down and fluttering secretly at heart. She did not reply on impulse, nor for a long time. Then, evenly enough, she spoke:

"I feel that you have honored me, Mr. Bliss, and I appreciate your clear, I shall be frank you in turn. You say you do not love me, and I can confess for you nothing deeper than esteem. I am poor, humble, and will soon be homeless. I would not have you later regret that I can be nothing more to you than a loyal, helpful wife, who, however, can never forget that in a conventence."

And so they were wedded, and, after the death of his uncle, Ransom Bliss and his bride took up their residence at the old family home. They settled down into their new life more like things Ransom was considerate and courteous and Elsie was a model housekeeper, and all that respect and thoughtfulness could suggest. Never Many a time, however, as he looked at the beautiful girl, like himself engaged in reading, Ransom realized that she was possessed of rare womanly qualities, white Eiste, in turn, when alone, sighed drearily, acknowledging his perfeetion as a man among men, and she was at variance with the compact they had made.

There came an unexpected separation a little later. The presence of Ransom was required in settling up some business of the estate at Abingdon, 24 miles distant. For the first few weeks he came home over Sunday, but finally his absence run into a full month. Elsie was wretched. An impulse came over her to at least see him. A trolley line ran to a junction half the distance and then joined another line. She reached it about eight o'clock in the evening to wait for the intersection car. From Abingdon there arrived a car branching off and a passenger alighted to wait for a connection. He came into the dimly lighted little station. Eisie recognized him as her husband.

"Why, Elsie!" he spoke in surprise, "I must tell you the truth," she said. "I was lonely without you. I was going to visit Abbugdon, if it was only to see you at a distance."

The man drew a deep breath, "And "only sought to look through the window of our home and see if you were well and happy."

"Happler now than I ever have had stolen about her waist.

"Eisle," he cried, "can it be possible that we made a mistake in the past?"

"You mean-" •
"In deciding that we cared for each other as only casual acquaintances might." "It has grown into something deeper than that with me," she whispered tenderly. And the surety of a first and lasting love engulfed the satisfied soul of the lonely man.

At Odd Purposes 00

By BELVA M. THORNE

T------(Copyright, 1919, by the Western News-

Martin Wolcott, bachelor, moved from Lisle to Clyde because he was in debt. Mrs. Althea Burrows, widow, remained in the latter town for the same reason. The coincidental similarity as to motive and environment went still further. Both were regarded as above the average as to wealth or the prospect of it. A third circumstance in this chain of sequence was the fact that Judge Alward Marsh, who had been Mrs. Burrows' attorney for ten years, became likewise the legal adviser of Mr. Wolcott.

Now neither of the two named made any pretense to the merest graze with opulence. Neither was over thirty, and both were healthy, accreditable and good looking. Common rumor had it, however, that the fair widow had inherited a gold mine out West that might at any time open its vast store of wealth. When Mr. Wolcott came to Clyde there followed him the report that when a certain lawsuit he had been fighting for five years was decided, he would become the recipient of a royal fortune.

The facts were really these: The alleged mine had never produced so much as an ounce of the precious metal, and Mrs. Burrows had leased the fifty acres involved for grazing purposes at barely enough to meet taxes and water right installments. As to the lawsuit, Wolcott had expended the porch Ransom Bliss appeared. He nearly all he had in legal fees and had hopelessly abandoned any anticipations of success in winning it.

As said, Wolcott had come to Clyde because he was in debt. Not that his Liste creditors were manifesting any collection pressure, for he was a favorite with everybody, but, finding himself growing poorer and poorer, he resolved to get down to real work. Elsie flushed quickly and her voice | He was a specialist in cattle diseases, was a trifle unsteady as she said with- and Clyde was the center of a large rich farming district.

It was at the office of Judge Marsh "Cared for you, Eisle? Yes Loved one day that Martin Wolcott met the charming widow. The observing old a thing to be named lightly. I am jurist's eyes twinkled as he sensed a mutual liking established between the an whom I more deeply respect and ad- two. It got to be so that Wolcott bemire, and I would be proud to call came a weekly visitor at the Burrows home. They were vastly pleased with each other and the prospective match met with the approval of their friends.

Mrs. Burrows had made some inquiry regarding Mr. Wolcott. It was to receive exaggerated intelligence as to the wonderful laws it that would place him so high above her in the way of wealth that her heart falled honest words. We have always been her. Wolcott did the same thing. He he heard about the undeveloped Gelconda in the Rockies which would make of Mrs. Burrows a social queen, who would naturally disdain the attentions of a poor and obscure individual like himself.

Wolcott began to curtail his calls upon Mrs. Burrows and the latter inmeasure this would be a marriage of fluenced by this and a realization of the vast gulf between them, tried to root out the love that might bring only disappointment and sorrow. They had not seen one another for two weeks, when they came face to face in the office of Judge Marsh. Each acted as partners than wedded mates. In all | if their relations were strained. The judge was not in evidence, but they decided to wait for him. A quick tenderness permeated the sensitive heart of the sympathetic widow as she nowas there a jar or misunderstanding, ticed that Wolcott looked thin and worried.

"You do not seem as well as when I last saw you, Mr. Wolcott," she said. "That is because I haven't seen so much of you," replied Wolcott bluntly.

"Is not that your own fault?" softly intimated the blushing widow. "Surely you have been always welcome at my home,"

"I have met with such kindly consideration," answered Wolcott in usstendy tones, "that I dared not continue my visits because I foresaw that it could end only in banishment." "How strangely you speak," she fluttered.

"Mrs. Burrows, I am a plain man." said Wolcott seriously. "It will be no news to you to know that you are to me the one woman in the world I respect, admire and cherish. It is only recently that I learned of your prospects of fortune. A poor man, I dared not presume that you would look upon me as your equal."

"Why, Mr. Wolcott," exclaimed Mrs. Burrows, "who ever gave you such a ridiculous idea. A poor man? It was when I learned of your coming wealth that I delt that I could never hopethat is-"

"Poor man, poor woman," interrupted Judge Marsh, bursting into the I." he said in tones that thrilled her, room radiant. "Mr. Wolcott, you have said enough to divest the situation of any misconception. Mrs. Burrows, you are too sensible a woman to resent an old friend like myself saying that been," she breathed raptly, for his arm | there is no possible barrier of inequality, socially or as to wealth, between you two. I sent for both of you to report that the people at the other end of the lawsuit are willing to compromise for fifty thousand dollars, and that they have discovered gold at the mine and it promises a fortune. Be nappy, my children," laughed the old jurist gleefully, and he waved himself from the room, and when he returned half an bour later the glowing faces of his clients told him that there would soon be a wedding.
