Mrs. Flatbush—Who is that man with the red nose you just bowed to?

Mr. Flatbush—Oh, he's a man I met out west.

"He is certainly not a prohibitionist, is he?"

"Why, I never had occasion to ask him, dear."

"But how did you happen to meet him?"

"Well, we were traveling out of Milwaukee on the same train one night. He had a bottle, and I discovered that I had a cork screw."—Yonkers Statesman.

Rich Find in an Old Dress.

When the personal effects of the once-famous dancer, "Rigolboche," who died recently in Paris at the age of eighty, were sold at auction, an old silk dress was knocked down to a second-hand clothes dealer for a mere song. On examining the garment the purchaser found concealed in the lining a bundle of French bank notes to the value of $1,060.

ACCESSORIES NOW TURN RIBBONWARD

IN THE making of dress accessories, ribbons appear to have eclipsed all other materials. Everything from hats to shoes and from undies to wraps looks to ribbon for adornment and, besides being used for making garnitures, it plays a part in the construction of many garments. To begin at the beginning in ribbon accessories, is to begin with sashes. There is a world of them to consider, from the simplest bands of the narrow fashionable two-toned, picot-edged ribbons that have decked sheer summery frocks, to gorgeous and intricate affairs in rich moire or brilliant brocade that are elaborated into bodices and draperies. There are sashes for afternoon and evening gowns and there are sashes for street gowns, all as different in character as the frocks themselves are. There are sashes that are prolonged into trains and others that become draperies for skirts or aspire into bodices, with the aid of malines or net or lace. Frocks are really merely lovely back grounds for these ambitious efforts of the accessory designer.

An affair of this kind claims consideration in the group of sashes pictured. This extravagant and ingenious arrangement consists of an overbodice and girdle which becomes a ripple of plaits over the hips and blossoms into loops and four hanging ends at the back. Two long ends reach the bottom of the skirt and are edged with frills of narrow lace. These and the two shorter ends are rounded. The filmy gown serves to set off this elaboration of the sash into the most important feature of the costume. It would be effective in any of the lovely colors used for evening dress.

A much simpler and more popular sash is made of wide, soft and plain satin ribbon. It is adjusted about the waistline in a crushed girdle that is brought twice around and raised at the left side. It is necessary to stay a girdle of this kind with wire or some other support. It is finished at the back with two loops and two ends and over its fastening at the side, a spray of small roses takes up the color of the ribbon and repeats it in many delightful tints.

A description of sashes for evening frocks might go on indefinitely, there are so many of them in such varied arrangements, but their growing importance in tailored frocks compels attention. For these there are fine tailored sashes like that pictured in the group shown here, and others, less staid. This one is made of black satin ribbon folded and arranged into two loops and one looped end. The folds are tacked to place. These tailored girdles and tailored hat ornaments are very interesting and designers find it worth while to specialize in making them.

PIN MONEY PROPOSITIONS

WOMEN who want to make pin money have found better success in specializing along certain lines of work than in trying many different things. They establish and build up a following that comes back to them year after year at holiday time, or at other seasons of the year. One bright woman in a small city has been making rag dolls and cloth animals at odd times for many years and selling them at holiday time. She has as much work as she cares to take and makes a good profit on it. These dolls are of all sizes and kinds; some of them made of old printed cotton dolls, which can be bought in the stores, but most of them ingeniously put together of scraps of cloth. It is interesting work and dolls that represent many different races help to make it fascinating to the worker.

Other holiday articles for children are easy to make. These are the cloth books. They are made of thin cambric in bright colors with pictures of all sorts, comic and otherwise, pasted on the pages. To make them, several thicknesses of newspaper are cut into uniform size for the pages. Each of these pages of several layers of paper is covered with the cambric and buttonhole stitched around the edges with bright-colored yarns and several of them tied together at the back. These bright-colored picture books delight the small children and the demand for them is constant.

In the larger towns and cities the specialist who makes pretty candle and lamp shades can place them in stores, and in bazaars at holiday time. Others, situated so that they have time for needlework, place embroidered lunch cloths, dollies and things of that character. A work of this kind that some women find profitable, is the making of layettes and embroidered dresses for little children. The making of layettes may be developed into quite a business by clever needle women, in thickly settled communities, where there are many young women who have little knowledge of needlework and cannot for this or other reasons, make their own baby's clothes.

One ingenious woman has invented an amusement that children enjoy. She cuts from magazines the colored pictures of foods—those perfect cakes, fruits, ham, breakfast foods, bread, bacon and rolls, that are so enticing. These are pasted against cardboard backgrounds, and a set of them, with a paper tablecloth, makes an outfit for a party. These foods are pictured in dishes so it is easy to set out a table with them. A paper tablecloth with a set of pictures wrapped in it is sold for a small but profitable price. The cloth animals are made by patterns, bought of the pattern companies and clothes that are adapted to the different animals, helped out with water color paints.

Some women are very successful in raising flowers and have capitalized this happy faculty until their friends look to them for blossoms and flowering plants. Considering the high prices asked for cut flowers, profits in this direction ought to be very good. One New England woman specializes in Jonquils; sweet violets in bunches find ready buyers in the cities. The marketing of perishable things presents some difficulties, but can be managed if one can find a distributor who will handle them for a commission.

To Clean Doekskin Gloves.
To clean light gray doekskin gloves let the gloves soak in a saucer with sufficient gasoline to cover them; take out, do not squeeze, but let the dirty liquid drop off. Lay on a thick clean cloth, and with a dry piece of rag rub down, working from the wrist to the fingers. Constantly change the surface of the rag, for as soon as it gets dirty it is apt to smear them. After this, if the gloves are not quite clean, put them through the same process again and hang in the air.

Face Looked Familiar.
Dinah was a product of New Orleans, a big, plump "yaller gal," who could cook the finest dinners for miles around. One day a new butler appeared upon the scene, and Dinah's mistress noticed that she took a great interest in the man.

At last her mistress could stand her curiosity no longer and asked: "Dinah, do you know that new man?"

Dinah took another long and scrutinizing look and then slowly and reminiscently replied: "Well, I dunno, Miss Alice; but I think he was my first husband!"—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

OATS BEST CROP

Statistics Show Advantages Over Corn Growing.

On Comparatively Cheap Land in Western Canada Farmers Get Record Yields—Cost Per Acre Much Less Than Corn.

How much more does it cost to grow an acre of corn than to grow an acre of oats? To get a proper comparison it is necessary to take an illustration from a farm on which both crops are grown successfully. An example has just been brought to the writer's attention of the comparative cost of growing corn and oats on a Minnesota farm. It is furnished by Albert Lamer, a well-known farmer in Cottonwood county, Minn., in an article which appeared in the Cottonwood Citizen.

Mr. Lamer says: "I had a curiosity to know how much it would cost to raise an acre of oats and corn. To find out I kept account, during the year, of the time required and the cash expended to grow the above mentioned crops." His figures show that it cost him $31.49 to grow an acre of corn and $18.13 to grow an acre of oats, or a difference of $13.00 an acre in favor of oats.

Provided the respective crop yields are not altogether out of proportion to the cost of growing the crop, this seems to be a good argument in favor of growing oats. But to grow oats successfully it is not necessary to use $150 or $200 land. In western Canada some of the best oat-growing land in the world can be bought for about $20 an acre. On this land good yields and a high quality of grain is obtainable.

Fifty to sixty bushels to the acre in properly prepared land is a fair average yield for oats in western Canada in a normal season but yields of up to 100 bushels, and even more, to the acre have been frequent in good years. The quality of oats grown in western Canada is attested by the fact that at all the international exhibitions for many years past oats grown in western Canada have been awarded the leading prizes. There is on record oats grown in western Canada that have weighed as much as 48 pounds to the measured bushel, and the dominion grain inspector is authority for the statement that 85 per cent of the oats examined by him in western Canada weigh more than 42 pounds to the measured bushel. The standard weight for a bushel of oats is 34 pounds.

Samples of these oats weighing upward of 45 pounds to the bushel are on exhibition at the Canadian government information bureau, located in various cities in the United States.—Advertisement.

Proper Pride Necessary.
Pride, like laudanum and other poisonous medicines, is beneficial in small, though injurious in large quantities. No man who is not pleased with himself, even in a personal sense, can please others.—Frederick Saunders.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

Heavy Traffic.
They seldom crowd the roads in northern Minnesota, but on our last tour, when we headed into a tamarack swamp and had to take our top off because of the low-hanging trees, we did feel a trifle uncertain about the route.

"Do many cars travel this road?" we asked some children who happened along.

"Oh, yes," came the proud reply; "lots of 'em. One came last year and one this year, an' now you're here, too!"

Strong Hint.
Henry's father owned a rolling mill, and generally took him out to see his favorite superintendent on Saturday. One Saturday morning, however, his father was in a great hurry, and failed to say anything about taking Henry with him. The little fellow stood it as long as he could, but finally sobbed, "Daddy, when you see Mr. Perry (the superintendent) will you please tell him that I'm awfully sorry you forgot to take me with you?"

Puts I Will In You Easy to Get Strong

Everyone wants more pep and surely needs it this hot weather. Hot weather takes away the appetite and makes one feel listless, lifeless, miserable, even when you have a strong stomach, but for those who have weak stomachs, it is really a dangerous, trying time.

Be on the safe side this kind of weather and help nature all you can, by taking an eatonic tablet about half an hour before you eat and one or two an hour after you eat; it will be of wonderful benefit. Eatonic simply takes up the excess acids, poisons and gases, and carries them right out of the body. With the cause of the trouble removed, of course you will feel fit and fine—full of pep all the time. Eatonic will cool feverish mouth and stomach and give you a good appetite, even in hot weather.

Get a big box at your druggist's for a trifling cost and let eatonic help you for a few days; then you will never be without it. Adv.

Psychological Moment.
"Do you mean to say that an old-timer like you feels uneasy when called upon to make a political speech?"

"Yes," admitted Senator Sorghum, "though I won't say it's exactly stage fright. You never can tell when everything might have gone your way if you hadn't happened to spring the wrong epigram or funny story."

He Kept On.
"Why are you staking out a lot here, my man?"

"Gonna live here."

"But you can't live here. This is the great American desert. It's too dry."

"I can't see that it's any dryer here than anywhere else."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
