Collins and Harlan Recital Pleases a Large Audience

The music lovers of Red Cloud who availed themselves of the invitation to attend the concert by Collins and Harlan at the Besse Auditorium last Friday evening will never forget the experience.

When Mr. Wm. Reed announced that the artists would sing in unison with a RE-CREATION of their own voices on the New Edison which stood upon the platform, we were skeptical. To attempt to match those splendid voices with a sound produced mechanically by a thing of steel or wood! It was preposterous.

When the first notes of the song came to our ears we were waiting breathlessly. And we continued breathless throughout the evening. At first Collins' and Harlan's voices and the voices from the Walnut cabinet beside them came to us indistinguishably blended—the four voices so completely one that no ear could detect their duality. Suddenly we realized that Collins' and Harlan's lips had ceased to move, though their voices went gloriously on! They sang again, and again stopped. Only by watching their lips could we tell whether their voices came to us from their throats, or from the magic box at their side. It was their voices in both cases—there was no question of that from the first. No mere echo or "record" could make us doubt the evidence of our own eyes. Their voices were there, whether they sang or were silent. Equal in tone, in clearness and in beauty, they filled the room, literally RE-CREATED by some magic power for our bewilderment.

The climax of the entertainment came when the room was darkened so that we could no longer see the singers, and had to judge by our ears alone whether the song as we heard it was the voice or RE-CREATION. We vacillated from one opinion to the other—now we thought Mr. Collins was singing—now that we heard the New Edison alone. The notes of the last verse filled the room. They were so clear, so true, so beautiful, that everyone in the audience was convinced that Mr. Collins was singing as we had not known that even he could sing. Suddenly the lights flashed on, the stage was empty, save for the Walnut cabinet from which floated forth the final wonderful phrases of the song.

RE-CREATION—we had never believed in it before, perhaps. We had thought it merely a trademark—a catch word. But for those who attended the tone test, RE-CREATION is no longer a word—it is a reality. A wonderful new art presented to the world by the greatest of living inventors—Thomas A. Edison.

The recital was arranged by E. H. Newhouse.

P. S. The old expression—in all probability originated by some witty curb-stone orator—"Every body and his dog was there" was true in this case as the house was packed to its utmost capacity. And we noted that the dog was also there. He remained silent until the concert reached the number that included other than human voices. The Re-Creation of the deep, bass voice of the bear brought forth applause from the canine visitor.

Red Cloud Defeated Bellaire

Tuesday afternoon at Lebanon, Kansas, occurred the much-advertised game of base ball between Red Cloud and Bellaire, who played a 29 inning game there during the Anniversary, which resulted in a victory for Red Cloud. But Tuesday's game was different as the batting was heavy from the first inning to the ninth.

Red Cloud had a team that was natural-born hitters and would make any team in this part of the state sit up and take notice.

Bellaire was also spiked. Their battery consisted of three pitchers, Messrs Rayburn and Cooley of Alma and Post of Bellaire. Willets was behind the bat.

Red Cloud's battery was Shrader and Lindgren.

The Red Cloud team had their opponents at their mercy throughout the game, as they commenced scoring in the first inning and batted the pitchers at will. Three home runs was made, Poinieky and Palmer of Red Cloud each making one, while Willets of Bellaire came up with the bases full and smashed out a home run which cleaned the bases. When the smoke of the game cleared away in the last half of the ninth inning Red Cloud had 17 scores and Bellaire 8.

Shrader pitched a good, steady game for Red Cloud and had excellent support throughout the game, as only one long hit was made off him during the entire game.

This morning the Grice & Grimes drug store received the two pigeons which they have entered into the Rexall pigeon race. The birds will leave here Saturday morning on their return flight to St. Louis.
