Mrs. Blackledge Succumbs After Lingerin Illness

When the death of Mrs. Blackledge became known, doubtless the first thought of most of the community was for the bereaved husband, the partner of her struggles, the chief object of her affections, and her ambition and pride. The just reward of a life of high professional character seems destined to be a barren prize, because it cannot be shared with her, whose affectionate counsel, encouragement and help was his chief support and guidance during the years of sacrifice and toil. His triumphs will no longer brighten the eyes whose beams lighted his pathway; and the voice which cheered his efforts will be silent when the success, prized chiefly for her sake, will be an unshared honor.

To mortal sense and thought there is an inexpressible sadness in the death of a woman like Mrs. Blackledge at her age. She had accomplished her life work, had reared her family; had seen a daughter and son established in their several homes and successfully started in their respective careers of usefulness and honor. A younger son was completing the studies which will fit him for an honorable life. She had accomplished this, when the hands of the clock had passed but a little beyond the mid day hour. There was still the promise of a long and tranquil close of day, gladdened by the joys of grandchildren to be. In mid afternoon her sky was overcast, and for her there was no slow descending sun, no blessed twilight in which to review the tasks well done, the defeats and triumphs of the working hours.

But in the faith, which was the vital element of her life, mortal sense and thought are not trustworthy reporters of the truth. She knew that there was an invisible and spiritual realm of which earth and earthly things are but shadows. In that realm she walks and lives circled with the beauty and glory "which eye hath not seen, ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive."

Mrs. Blackledge during her residence in this city was the mainstay of the Episcopal church, of which she was a devoted member. Faithful during its hours of discouragement, she lived to witness its entrance upon an era of rich and abundant promise. She took a deep interest in the educational and social welfare of the community, and, had she lived, her home would have been one of the chief centers of the impulses that make for a wider, higher and richer life to all.

Mrs. Blackledge died at noon on Friday, September 17. She was born in Illinois, March 28, 1872. On September 16, 1891, she was united in marriage to Lewis H. Blackledge, at McCook, they moving to Red Cloud in June, 1899. She is survived by her husband, L. H. Blackledge, her daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Turnure, her two sons, Allan, an Ensign in the U. S. Navy, and Hobart, a student of the University. A little granddaughter, Doris Ann Turnure, had already given to the grandmother a foretaste of the happiness she could reasonably expect, but of which she has been deprived on earth.

Funeral services were held from the Grace Episcopal church Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.—Written by Attorney Jas. S. Gilham for Monday's Commercial Advertiser.

A. V. Ducker has sold his residence to A. C. Hale who will move into the same as soon as Mr. Ducker finds a residence to move into.

Operator A. C. McKee, who had been here for the past week working second trick at the depot, went to Eckley Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Trine returned from Lincoln, Monday evening, where they had been making arrangements for the entering of their daughter, Miss Verna, into the University. In addition to the regular course of study she will specialize in music being exceptionally gifted as a pianist, considering her youth. She has been honored by being accepted as a pupil by Professors Silver and Steckenburg, at the University. Ordinarily they only accept pupils who have already spent one year or more in the University. The return trip proved rather unfortunate for Mr. and Mrs. Trine, they having experienced more than the average amount of motorists' hard luck. A blow out was the first calamity to befall them. Again proceeding on their way everything went well until a broken king bolt caused the car to leave the road and shake up the occupants considerably. George says they arrived in Red Cloud along in the wee hours of morning.

The Actuelle

Greater than the Phonograph

Different in construction
Superior in tone
Actual in reproduction

THE ACTUELLE—a Pathe Freres invention—marks the first really radical advance in the science of sound reproduction since sound recording was invented.

The result achieved is a natural purity of tone which would have been beyond belief less than twelve months ago.

Now comes the real revolutionary advance—and again it is the Pathe organization that has won out—with the Actuelle.

Exit Sound Box, Tone Arm, Horn

The problem of the phonograph maker is to take out of the way of the tone obstructions which affect the reproduction in a lesser way. The tone box, the tone arm, the tone chamber and horn are in the way. The ACTUELLE discards all the obstacles. A taut wire carries the tone direct from the record to a parchment cone which amplifies and reproduces the tone in its natural, vivid vigor, with a full fidelity that no phonograph could ever equal.

Come in and hear this wonderful instrument play your favorite records. We will be pleased to have you call.
