

Tuning Your Piano!

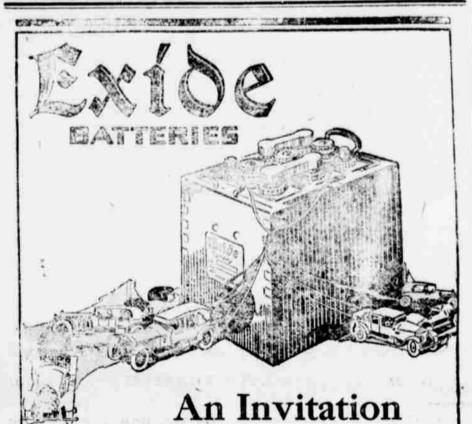

The proverbial brass band of the street which squawks its inharmonous music under the windows of the tenement districts of the large cities always causes distress to the listeners. To the player the music seems most harmonious; to others is discordant and out of tune.

If your piano has not been tuned recently you are in a similar position. Although your instrument seems good enough to you it is really out of tune and is not delivering to you and your friends the maximum amount of pleasure.

You'll be surprised how a single tuning will rejuvinate your instrument or will make your piano seem as fresh and clear in tone as the day you purchased it.

. Telephone or write us regarding our excellent tuning service. One of our skilled artisans is at your disposal THE LAST PART OF NEXT WEEK to regulate, repair and tune.

THE CODE TAX BILL

The more that Senate File No. 65, of the state, the higher rises the tide of indignant protest and opposi-tion. It appears, essentially, to be a bill to raise more revenues to meet the needs of an expensive code commission system of government, and to do it by penalizing industry, enter-prise, agriculture and home owning

That is why the farmers of the state are protesting, why wholesale and retail business men are protesting, why home owners and those who realize the necessity of a building campaign in Nebraska are protesting. campaign in Nebraska are protesting. Some other interests, it is true, appear to be very well satisfied with the bill as the state senate is whipping it into shape. The railroads, stockyards, packing houses, banks, owners of stocks and securities in general, appear to be content.

Under the provisions of the bill farm property and real estate of all kinds is to be assessed and taxed on its full value. Local control over taxation is abolished and extraordinary powers are vested in the tax ary powers are vested in the tax commissioner at Lincoln, with a force of tax ferrets under his hand, to in-sure that all tangible and visible property is listed and taxed at a full 100 per cent. But the intangible property, money, shares of stocks and securities, while listed at its actual value, is to pay a merely nominal tax of 4 mills on the dollar. The farm-er, the home owner, will pay a tax of from five to ten times as much, and in some instances even more than

One certain effect of such a system of taxation will be to cripple building trades, because it will more profitable to invest money securities than in homes and build-It will tend toward a shortage in homes, and a shortage in homes is the cause of the present surdensome rent and housing conditions that the legislature thought required a special committee to investi-

The legislature might much better have made tax provisions to encourage home building. A provision ex-empting from taxation, say for a period of five years, buildings erected for homes, similar to that which has enormously stimulated building in New York, would much better have met the needs of Nebraska at this time. But the legislature goes to the other extreme, penalizes building and industry, and awards the prize of a very low tax to the man who keeps his money idle. A farmer member of the senate has declared that he would have been a great deal of money ahead if he had sold his farm and stock in 1917 and invested the money in low interest securities. He might have remained idle, he said, instead of working hard and long hours, and would now be better off financially. A few more boosts towards a policy such as the administration proposes in Senate File No. 65, and the farm-ers may do it.—Omaha World Herald.
