What Ailed Her Pulse.
Little Louise was recovering from a bit of fever and her appetite had begun to assert itself. She gave a look at the meager slice of toast and the broth that had been brought to her bedside.
"Can't I have more than this, mother?" she asked. "It isn't half enough."
"Just yet," said mother. "I am afraid to give you more. Your pulse is still too quick."
"But, mother," urged Louise, "don't you see it's my excitement because I can't get enough to eat that makes my pulse so quick."—Exchange.

BOTH BEAR THE GOODYEAR NAME

One of the tires shown above is the famous 30x3 1/2 inch Goodyear All-Weather Tread Clincher. By long wear, superior traction and freedom from skidding, and low final cost, this tire has won unquestioned leadership in its field. Alongside it is illustrated its companion, the 30 x 3 1/2 inch Goodyear Cross Rib. Both these tires are built in a factory devoted exclusively to manufacturing Goodyear Tires for small cars. More than 5,000,000 of the Goodyear non-skid tires have been sold in the last five years. Built of the same high grade Egyptian cotton fabric that goes into the All-Weather Tread Goodyear, with a long-wearing but differently designed tread, they have given remarkable service. Their quality and serviceability have proved to thousands of car owners the folly of buying unknown and unguaranteed tires of lower price. Ask your Goodyear Service Station Dealer to explain their advantages.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

IN HER HUSBAND'S MEMORY

Mrs. Maude Donohue, Minnesota Newspaper Woman, to Erect Building as Memorial.

The day Mrs. Maude A. Donohue's husband enlisted she went to work on the editorial staff of the San Francisco Examiner. She is now editor and publisher of a progressive little weekly paper at Cokato, Minn., trying, by keeping herself always occupied, to forget the day when she received the news that her husband had been killed in action in France.

Mrs. Donohue intends this year to erect a new newspaper building in Cokato as a memorial to "My Bill," and then she intends as a "distant dream" to write a book of his life. Last year she visited her husband's grave at Romange, where 22,000 were buried in the heart of the Argonne wood.

Probably no paper in the country gives more sympathetic treatment to the problem of the returned soldier than does the weekly at Cokato. "The tragedy of war has broadened my viewpoint," says Mrs. Donohue. "There is much to be done, and I'm frank to say that I expect great things of the American Legion as an organization representing men who know what the word 'service' means."

FRENCH AWARD IS DECLINED

Legion's National Commander Accepts Honor Only in Name of Those Who Served.

Hanford MacNider is one of the negligible number of persons who declined the award of "commander of the Legion of Honor," proffered by the French government. Mr. MacNider, as national commander of the American Legion, adroitly shifted the honor to the heads of a million soldiers. He said that he could receive the decoration only as a tribute to all Legionnaires—and when the medal arrives it will be deposited in the archives of the Legion.

When he received the notification of the award, he cabled Marshal Foch: "In the name of 5,000,000 service men and women represented by the American Legion, we extend through you to the President of the French republic our gratitude over the tribute proffered. Realizing that this is not awarded to me personally we accept it for every man and woman of our organization and in extending our deep thanks pledge to France our continued love and devotion."
Mr. MacNider was made a chevalier of the Legion of Honor on the battlefield in 1918.

AERIAL POLO IS NEW SPORT

Aerial polo is the latest sport. One of the chief features of an entertainment given by the American Legion at Miami, Fla., was a game of polo staged high in the air, sans mallets, sans ponies, sans ball, sans everything except a dozen nimble aviators and several dozen toy balloons.

Every sort of twist from the Immelman turn to the maple-leaf drop is called into play during the contest. Here is what happens: A motorboat loaded with the many-colored balloons of the proverbial country fair plows out into the harbor and drops anchor. From nearby hangars come galloping a dozen Pegasuses. They take the air, and when they are equidistant from the launch, at a safe altitude, the little balloons are released and go soaring upward in great confusion on the wind.

The air rider who captures the greatest number is declared the winner. The Legion pilots who tried it said that it used to be easier catching Taubes.

Would Postpone This Expense.

The dome of the proposed Victory Memorial building in Washington would be virtually a huge service flag. It would be studded with five million stars—gold for those who died, blue for those who served. The plan is to have each star engraved with the initials of the soldier it stands for, so that future visitors will be able to distinguish them, with the aid of a telescope, from the floor below. The American Legion has taken the stand that the erection of the expensive memorial should be withheld until there are fewer suffering veterans on the streets.

ARENA BATTLES FOR LEGION

Famous Castilian Matador, Ex-German Fighter, Stages Bloodless Conflicts With Angry Bulls.

To show that bull-fighting is really as simple, and as bloodless, and as refreshing as a quiet game of golf, Senor Charlot Molino, famous Castilian matador, has been staging arena battles all over the country for the benefit of the American Legion. Molino is an ex-German fighter, besides being a bull-fighter.

When he goes into the ring with his fire-breathing animal, he carries a small red cloth to make the animal wroth. He carries no sword and trusts entirely to his adroit footwork to save him from embarrassment at the horns of the bull. He wears a gaudy costume of red velvet trimmed with gold, valued at $2,000.

The Legion has picked up the idea of "bloodless bull-fighting," and recently staged an encounter in the Jersey City stock yards with the matador armed with a fence picket. Although the matador had to jump the fence on several occasions in order to keep the true "bloodless" nature of the affair, he succeeded in putting on a good battle.

SKETCHES WON THE RECRUITS

Alvan Hadley, Crayon Artist, Now "Drawing" Some of the Prominent Legion Men.

Alvan C. ("Hap") Hadley, crayon expert and ex-marine, travels with a Greenwich Village troupe. He probably recruited more marines by his clever sketches, during the war, than any other individual. No one that ever looked very hard at one of his pictures ever stayed out of the marines, and no one that ever looks very hard now ever stays away from his show. He is at present busy sketching prominent members of the American Legion, outside of "hours," for publication in newspapers.

When "Hap" enlisted in the marine corps at Paris Island, a red-necked sergeant asked him what his occupation was.
"Artist," said Hap.
So the sergeant put him to work white-washing garbage cans. The crowning disappointment of Hap's life is that he never ran across that sergeant again.

JOB FOR EX-SERVICE MEN

Civic Organizations Co-Operating With American Legion to Find Work for Ex-Soldiers.

Civic organizations are co-operating with the American Legion in every city, town and hamlet throughout the country to put across the nationwide drive for employment for the 700,000 ex-service men now out of a job.

The Legion is aiming to get men into jobs by stirring up the industrial life in communities. Distribution of employment by changing men on daily shifts; pushing of engineering projects, bridge repair and county highway improvement; speeding up of municipal and public utility enterprises—woodyards, recreation centers, dredging, installation of telephones, paving; reforestation and reclamation projects; truck gardening, with the establishment of community gardens worked by ex-soldier labor; stimulating building of all kinds; encouragement of the "back-to-the-farm movement"—these and many more methods are being used to give the distressed jobless man a chance once more to do a day's work.

Carrying On With the American Legion

With mingled feelings, Legion men read that the old yellow, groaning Paris taxi-cabs—the vehicles that took Gallieni's army off to fight on the Marne, are to be replaced.

A United States marine sold the United States superdreadnaught New Mexico to a retired farmer at Long Beach, Cal., for $900 cash. Navy officials, however, refused to deliver the ship.

An Oklahoma sheriff allowed three "killings" to take place without much opposition. Ewing C. London, commander of the Ardmore post of the American Legion, was appointed his successor.

Varying conditions existing in the different parts of the country will largely determine what proportion of service men will desire cash payment, the Legion has learned from its referendum votes.

Blind beggars sometimes have good eyesight, the American Legion has found. One "ex-soldier" with medals bought from a hock shop was caught taking $50 an hour from New York's theater crowds.
