FARM BUREAU NOTES

(By County Agent, Henry R. Fausch)
THE HUMAN SCRUB

If nature's design is the physical perfection of man and beast, and must be quite well satisfied as she looks upon the products which have been developed under the designation of "pure bred." Nothing more graceful in creation is to be found than the high bred horse. The pure bred bull and cow are masterpieces in contour and coloring. The fowls of the air are not more beautiful in their investiture of plumage than our standard bred poultry.

But what about man, who is given dominion over these creatures? Well humanity appears to have been so fully occupied with improving beasts and birds and vegetation that it has even deteriorated. When a man wishes to point to specimens of physical perfection in his kind he reverts to the days of old, when physical perfection of the human being was the chief aim and when sculptors preserved for all time the beauty that was attained.

Compare man with his live stock—the pure breeds he has coddled into near perfection. He is outclassed, for he is really a scrub. If the culling process which he applies to his stock and poultry were made the test of his fitness to live he would be eliminated.

There is keen competition in development of live stock, but premium lists at fairs do not offer prizes to encourage efforts to "complete" humanity.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MUST HAVE STIMULANT

The call meeting of the local Chamber of Commerce in the Club rooms, on last night, for the purpose of going into recent complaints of dissatisfaction, inactivity, etc., disclosed the fact, by the treasurer's report, that while the Club was financially somewhat in arrears, the amount was not of sufficient size as to warrant undue anxiety, but that the slate could be cleaned on collecting up of back dues and the disposal of one billiard table, which long ago was considered superfluous.

Messrs. R. P. Weesner, W. G. Hamilton and Dr. Robert Martin were appointed a committee to arrange a banquet and open meeting to be held, in all probability, next week. At this time all members and others interested in the future of the organization are to be summoned around the table, when it is hoped ways and means, of cutting expenses in the Club's operation, finding out just what really is expected of such an organization and the prescribing of the necessary stimulant will be staged. In the meantime, it behooves us all to give the matter a little earnest thought and if possible aid in putting "the patient" even beyond the need of a spring tonic in 1923.

Miss Jessie Kellog Wants Facts on The Code Bill

Governor McKelvie's code law was warmly endorsed by half a dozen speakers at the republican state committee meeting in the Lindell hotel Monday evening; but when a woman member of the committee, Miss Jessie Kellog of Red Cloud, asked to be enlightened upon its merits, so that she could answer criticisms of the law in her home community, nobody could give her the desired information.

"I'll have to admit that our folks out at Red Cloud are rowing over the code bill a whole lot," Miss Kellog stated. "I wish someone here would give me the facts about it. If there is anyone who can do this, I'd be glad to talk with him after the meeting."

An awkward silence followed. Previous speakers had praised the code and declared that if the real facts concerning it were given to the voters the republican party would surely win. But no one present seemed to know anything about the facts.

State Senator C. H. Randall, candidate for governor, who helped to put the code law through the legislature in 1919 and who had the backing of the code organization in the primaries, was sitting up front, but he had nothing to say.

Chairman E. B. Perry waited a moment for someone to volunteer, and inquired:

"Is Mr. Cross here?" Cross absent, nothing doing. But was promise the information the next day.

So, when Miss Kellog goes home to Red Cloud, she will carry with her a grip full of dope, supplied by the 50,000 a-year secretary of finance in Governor McKelvie's code cabinet.—Lincoln Star.
