We Must Fight The Chinch Bug Now

Farmers throughout a large part of the winter wheat territory should not overlook the fact that chinch bugs are more numerous and more wide spread this fall than for the past several years; and unless the coming winter should prove unfavorable for them, or some means is provided to exterminate them, they are certain to do more damage next season than ever.

THEY LIVE OVER WINTER
 Chinch bugs hibernate over winter. They protect themselves by hiding under trash, dead grass, around the crowns of bunch grass, etc. Their winter home is, therefore, largely along fences, road sides, ravines, waste lands and pastures. Serious destructive outbreaks of the pest in wheat fields have been traced directly to the influence of shocks of corn allowed to stand in the wheat fields throughout the winter. The chinch bugs which flocked to these corn shocks the previous autumn, suitable quarters not being available elsewhere, were thus protected throughout the winter. During the following March and April, the bugs that have lived over winter come out of hiding and fly to the growing wheat or oat fields, where they deposit their eggs. Each female lays about five hundred eggs, and these hatch and begin doing their damage in about sixty days.

By harvest time a few of them may have wings, but the majority will not, consequently they travel "on foot" from the wheat or oats to the corn, kafir, sorghum or some other crop. After becoming full grown and doing a lot of damage, these bugs deposit another bunch of eggs for another brood, which will come along about sixty days later. It is the bugs of this second brood that live over winter, and which we must destroy if we prevent their damage next season.

PREVENTION
 Kill the bugs this fall--prevention is the best cure. In the spring female bugs that live over winter fly everywhere, depositing their eggs largely on growing crops of wheat and oats. It is therefore best that campaigns for destroying these bugs should be put on by whole communities, or better still by whole counties.

There are two general ways of destroying them in their winter quarters--by plowing and burning; burning being far more effective than anything else.

PLOWING: In badly infested fields of corn, kafir and similar crops, it is an excellent plan to harvest and pasture early and then plow before the ground freezes. Fall or early winter plowing usually proves best for winter planting; besides it destroys many chinch bugs that are hibernating in the stalks, among the weeds, under trash or under freshly spread manure.

BURNING: Burn or remove every possible hiding place. Burn when grass and weeds are very dry and when there is very little wind. In order to burn close to the ground and insure killing a large percentage of the bugs, it is often advisable to back-fire and burn against the wind. Be sure to burn all bunch grass. By thorough burning between now and Christmas, bugs that are not destroyed by the fire will be exposed during the winter and many that remain will die before spring.

BOOKHART LEADS IN IOWA

Republican Candidate for Senate has Big Lead in Seventy-five Precincts

Des Moines.—Smith W. Brookhart, republican candidate for United States senator, led Clyde L. Herring, democratic nominee, nearly two to one in the first seventy-five precincts to report, out of 2,348 in the state. The vote was: Brookhart, 11,415; Herring, 6,291.

Governor N. E. Kendall in fifty-six precincts received 10,560 votes and J. R. Files, democratic candidate, 2,961. The proposal to issue $22,000,000 state bonds to finance a soldiers' bonus of the state received 3,482 votes compared to 976 against in fifteen precincts.

Robinson, Hampton banker, nearly two to one upon reports from fourteen out of 217 precincts in the district. Eleven of these precincts, however, were from Dubuque, a former "wet" stronghold.

In the second Iowa district, out of 164 precincts, W. G. Cook, democrat, had 4,303 votes and Harry Hall, republican, 3,796.

Elsewhere in the state republican candidates for congress had comfortable leads in returns.

Pricks All the Year.
 The glaucous maiden-hair tree has bright yellow foliage that is most useful in ornamental plantings, says the American Forestry Magazine. Not only is the color a clear pure yellow, but the peculiar shape of the leaf gives a texture to the tree that is quite different from others. The leaves are shaped much like the pinnae, that is, the smallest divisions of the frond of the maiden hair fern, very much enlarged. The tree is attractive at all seasons.

Don't Fill It.
 A hot-water bottle should never be really filled. If it is to be put in a bed to warm it have it only about three-quarters full.
