Every One Heard.
Six-year-old Helen's father was a fleshy man and, for comfort, wore his clothing quite loose. He took Helen one night to a circus which was showing in the town.

When the huge elephants were brought into the ring for their stunts, she was uneasy and doubtful. But when the last big elephant passed her seat in making his exit, during a lull in the applause, she exclaimed in a very audible voice, "Oh, papa, his pants fit him just like yours do you."

THE UTE LEGEND OF CREATION

IN THE beginning of time there were no mountains, no streams, no hunting grounds and no forests. In those days there were no red men roaming the plains, no bison, no antelope and no living things. Even was there no earth, but only the blue sky and the clouds and the sunshine and the rain. The Manitou, who dwelt in the center of the sky, lived all alone. There were no smaller gods in Heaven—and he was the ruler of the sky and the sun and the rain; and the lightning and the thunder were at his command, and the sun shone and the rain fell at his desire.

But by and by the Manitou grew tired and lonely and wished for new things to see and new work to do. So he took a stone and whirled it round and round until he bored a hole through the floor of Heaven, which is the sky. And the hole he made larger and larger until he could look through at the nothingness beyond. And he was much pleased.

When he had made a big hole in the sky and was able to look through, then he took the snow and the rain, and this he poured through the hole in the sky also. With it he poured, too, the stones and the dirt from the floor of Heaven. And the snow and the rain and the dirt and the stones fell from Heaven into the great nothingness, and the Manitou was pleased with his work.

By and by, when he had poured for days, he looked down and saw below him a great mountain which had been built by the rain and the snow, the dirt and the rocks. And far below the mountain he could see a great plain which stretched away and away as far as he could see—for great was the quantity of dirt and rock which he had poured.

Seeing the mountain, the Manitou was curious to know what lay beyond and what wonder the dirt and the rock had worked. So he made the hole bigger, until he was able to crawl through and then he stepped down from the floor of the sky to the summit of the great mountain which he had formed. When he had come down he found that the earth and the stones had spread out and had formed the world, which was large and vast. But it was a world of bare rock and dirt, and the Manitou wished for something to make it more beautiful.

He stooped and touched the earth with his fingers, and wherever he touched the trees sprang forth and forests were made, and the plains were made green with the trees and the shrubs. The sunshine which came through the hole in the sky which the Manitou had made warmed the air and melted the snow, and great lakes of water were made; and the water ran down the side of the mountain and made the streams. And on the level land of the plains great lakes were formed and rivers flowed and seas grew, and grass sprang up and flowers—and the world became very beautiful.

So was the world created, and it was a world of sunshine and warmth—a pleasant world where the rain fell on the afternoon of every day and trees grew, and flowers and shrubs. And the Manitou, seeing it, was very pleased.

Every day he came down from his home in the sky to roam in the fields and to rest by the side of the streams or in the shade of the forests—and the world became his playground where, he rested when his work in the Heaven was done.

But at that time there were no living creatures, no birds and no beasts, no bear and no wolves, and no fishes, and no red men—nothing but trees and grass and water.

By and by the Manitou became lonely and wished for some one to inhabit these lands which he had made so beautiful, some one with whom he could talk and play. So he created the living creatures and put them on the earth—but that is another story.

Note—The Utes, always a mountain tribe, have always been influenced in their legends and their folk-lore by the majesty and mystery of the mountains, which have been a part of their environment. It is only to be expected, therefore, that their very first legend—the legend of creation—should be centered about one of the great peaks which they knew and loved.

HAD GOOD REASON TO WAIL

Traveler Surely Was in a Predicament That Afforded Cause for Mournfulness.

The conductor on the California Limited between Chicago and Los Angeles noticed that one of the passengers sat in his section hour after hour and sobbed. The first night out of Chicago the conductor was tempted to ask what the trouble was, but having learned from previous experiences that one is better off minding one's own business he did not do so. On the second day, as the passenger continued to weep and wail, he was even more strongly tempted to go to the man's aid, but still he refrained. On the third day, however, the sobs of the traveler were so great that he could not resist any longer and he approached him politely with the question:

"Please tell me what is the trouble?"
"Oh, oh, oh," sobbed the passenger. "I've been on the wrong train for three days."—Exchange.

STRANGER IN THEIR MIDST

Gap Johnson's Progeny Naturally Resented the Presence of Interloper in the Family.

"A short distance up the road," said a tourist who had halted his car in front of the residence of Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, "I met a small boy legging it for his life, with a howling mob of children of assorted sizes pursuing him and fairly raining stones, clubs and blistering epithets around him."

"Eh-yah!" replied Mr. Johnson, "The party of the first part was Gabe Giggery's boy, and the mob was composed of some of my children, chasing him home. You see, their maw washed 'em all up a spell ago, and when they looked each other over they found that kid of Gabe's had been amongst 'em for nobody knows how long, eating, drinking and making merry, as it were. Whurpon they gave a united yell of fury and started to swarm all over him, and he let off a screech of terror and defunct out of yur as the crow flies!"—Kansas City Star.

Chopping Him Off.

"Sir," whined the meekly mendicant. "I am in great distress. The wolf is howling at my door. What shall I do?"

"Go out and let him eat you!" snarled J. Fuller Gloom.—Kansas City Star.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

PESSIMIST LIFTS HIS VOICE

World Surely is in a Bad Way, or This Writer's Liver is Out of Order.

Strike and the world strikes with you, work and you work alone; our souls are ablaze with the apathy craze, the wildest that ever was known.

Groan and there'll be a chorus. Smile and you make no hit, for we've grown long hair and we preach despair and show you a daily fit.

Spend and the gang will cheer you, save and you have no friend, for we throw our bucks to birds and ducks and borrow from all who'll lend.

Knock and you'll be a winner. Boost and you'll be a frost; for the old sane ways of the pre-war days are now from the program lost.

Strike and the world strikes with you, work and you work alone, for we'd rather yell and raise blue hell than strive for an honest bun.—Roy K. Moulton in the New York Evening Mail.

Police to Check Highway Defects.
On the theory that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure the District of Columbia has selected a given road territory on which patrolmen have been placed, whose duty it is to locate highway defects and report the same immediately.

Just as soon as reported, the damage is repaired.

While the patrolmen in the District of Columbia are not specifically called upon to furnish information to drivers, yet this service naturally follows in the performance of their duties.

More Potent.

George Cohan was talking at the Lambs club about a very popular song-bird of revue.

"Is she good?" a poet asked.
"Well," said Mr. Cohan, "I have known more assiduous church-goers."

"Oh, you know what I mean. Is she good? Has she got a good voice?" persisted the poet.

"Her voice is insured," said Mr. Cohan, "for $250. Her figure is insured for $300,000."
