Chautauqua Closes

Thursday afternoon the Marimaphone Singers opened the Chautauqua with vocal and instrumental specialties, monologues and ensemble entertainment in costume. The heat was forgotten by the audience who listened to the sparkling music and humorous readings. They acted as prologue number both afternoon and evening to Dean W. J. Lamon's two lectures, "Woman's place in Nation Building" and "Growing Pains of a Changing World."

The afternoon lecture "Woman's Place in Nation Building" summed up the important place wives, mothers, daughters and sweethearts were to fill in the future of our nation.

Mr. Lamon chose an international subject in the evening "Growing Pains of a Changing World." He spoke with authority and kept his audience keenly awake throughout.

"Peg O' My Heart" was featured with great success by the E. Henri Boyd, New York players, Friday afternoon. The play was a typical English one, and although put on in previous years, has never met with as much success heretofore.

In the evening the Boyd entertainers gave a splendid prelude, composed of vocal and instrumental music. In the second half of the evening's program, Private Peat, World War Veteran and lecturer, gave as his subject, "The Inexcusable Lie of the Ages". Private Peat needs no introduction as his fame as a speaker is recognized everywhere. After hearing his lecture one is convinced of his qualities as a speaker also as a man.

Saturday's program included a varied concert by the Artists' Trio. Miss Geraldine Ellis soprano and Leo Braverman furnished fresh thrills by his performance on his Italian violin. Miss Edna Smith, third member of the trio, gave the second part of the afternoon program. Her pianologues, interpretations and stories brought a quick response from her audience.

In the evening the Trio furnished the prelude to Mrs. Trimble's lecture, "Friendship First." Mrs. Trimble is a lecturer who speaks with authority on many subjects. She is the wife of the circuit manager Nelson Trimble and her lecture ranks as one of the big numbers on the chautauqua.

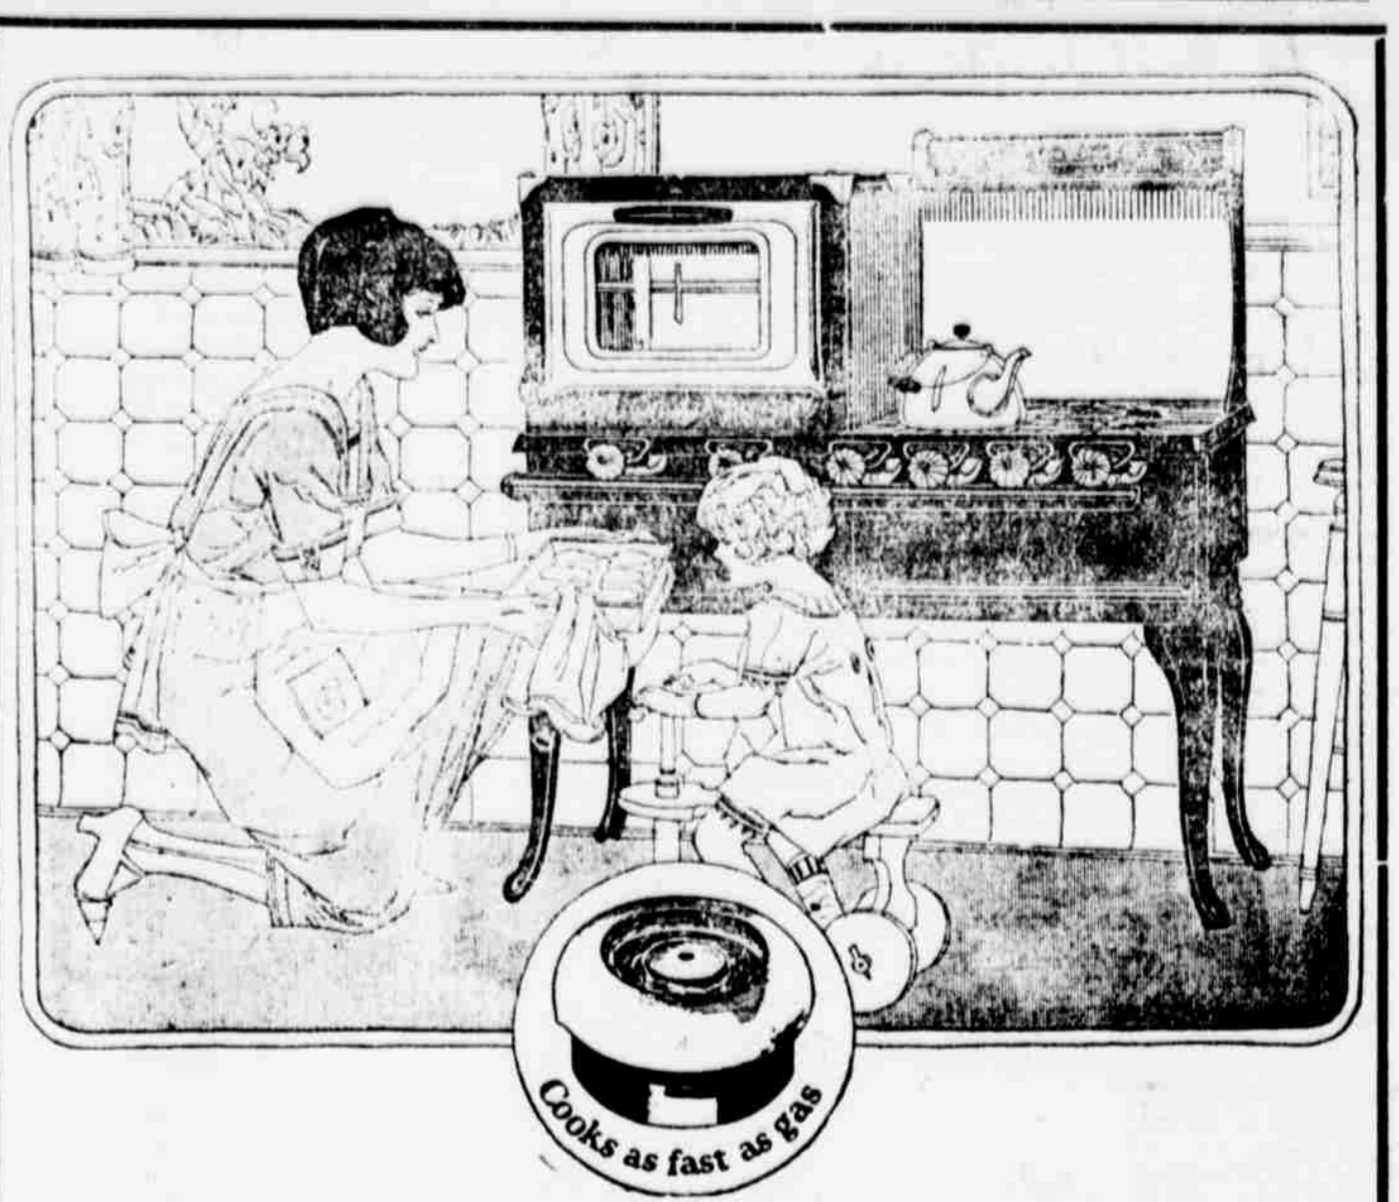

Sunday's program included the Centre Six Musical Sextet from Centre College of Kentucky. These men are students from the famous Centre College of Danville, Kentucky and one of their men belongs to that famous team who beat Harvard last year.

"Gray Wolfe" spoke both afternoon and evening in the absence of Dr. H. W. Sears. "Gray Wolfe" is a veteran of the World War, who has lived with the Indians, studying their customs, and ways of living. He impersonates an Indian warrior pleading his cause to the paleface.

The Centre Six Sextet closed the five days Chautauqua, with a program of college songs, solos and classical music.

Red Cloud people enjoyed in full the five days chautauqua in spite of the intense heat. It is said by those who attended to be the best talent brought to this town in years.

Glenn Fry of Red Cloud today received the university state certificate at the summer commencement of Nebraska Wesleyan University. A large audience attended the exercises. The speaker for this event was the Rev. L. R. DeWolf of York whose subject was "A Man and His World". He said in brief:—"The world today needs leaders. One has to do vitally only with one world, his own. He gains profit of experience with the past by reading history. He is responsible only for his own day. This is a world of wide spread information, very inadequately understood. Nobody confesses himself ignorant. The average person feels he knows everything. This smattering of information has led to impatience with the past. A ruthless iconoclasm takes place. Every class has its radicals and its conservatives. There is a feeling that the bible is out of date. But the doctrines of the bible are old and new. Remorse is still the same. The tenderness of God that reaches out to everyone is old as the sun. Man needs to understand his age. He should seek also a place of spiritual rest. One cannot close the windows of his soul to God who is the source of all mind"—Sent by A. C. Hunter, University Place, Nebr.
