

He found it in Valparaiso

Then he headed north and found it up near the "jumping-off place"

No matter what part of the world you may find yourself in, few things make you feel more at home than to walk into a store and discover your favorite smoking tobacco for sale.

You get a great thrill from seeing your home newspaper in a strange land and an even greater thrill on meeting someone from the old home town. But tobacco certainly comes next in the order of importance in away-from-home thrills.

With your favorite tobacco in your favorite pipe, life is worth living in almost any corner of the globe.

This thought was inspired by the following interesting letter from Mr. W. E. Bromley, an Edgeworth smoker from Fort Wayne, Ind.:

Larus & Brother Co., Richmond, Va.

Gentlemen:

In some of your advertisements from time to time I have noticed letters from different users of Edgeworth Smoking Tobacco and I wondered if anyone ever had a more varied experience than I have had.

When in Valparaiso, South America, I could get it; and when I was as far north as a man could go without going to the "jumping-off place," I could get Edgeworth Ready-Rubbed.

I have an old briar that I have had for ten years and it never had a crumb of any but Edgeworth in it.

If that isn't going some, "Edgeworth" is yours truly, (Signed) W. E. Bromley.

If Mr. Bromley's account skips from Valparaiso to South America, his record of getting his tobacco but Edgeworth out of his briar is indeed noteworthy.

Although Edgeworth does reach the far corners of the earth, there must be times when the supply runs low in Zanzibar and other remote districts.

But as a rule Edgeworth smokers, wherever they are, generally manage to find a way to get Edgeworth, for they don't feel as if they are really smoking unless the tobacco comes from a little blue can.

If you are not an Edgeworth smoker but would like an opportunity to find out if you want to be one, send your name and address to Larus & Brother Company, 80 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va.

You will receive almost immediately free samples of both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed. Then you can judge for yourself what you think about this tobacco; that so many smokers claim gives complete pipe-satisfaction.

If you will include the name and address of your regular tobacco dealer with your request for the free samples, your courtesy will be appreciated.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus Brother Company will gladly send you prepared by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

Borrow Modes From Elders;

Jacket Blouse Scores Success

SINCE simplicity is the keynote of summer fashions, many ideas for children's frocks are borrowed from the modes for their elders. Straight lines, short sleeves and especially decorative features, tell the world that the little miss, entering, or in her early teens, is apt to own a frock which mimics one of her mother's, in several details. And dresses for the flapper or debutante may develop much in and jackets are of the same material. At the left, a very smart model is made of light silk printed in an old Persian design. It slips on over the head and is gathered at the low waistline into a belt of the same material. The rather high V neck is finished with a flat collar and bow tie of the material. In the sleeves the tendency of the late summer styles is emphasized. These are set-in, have a wide common with those of a youthful grandmother.

In the little frock pictured here, for instance, a silk crepe proclaims that it looks as well on children as on grown-ups. The narrow val lace frills used for decorating it are favorites on afternoon dresses for women of any age, and so is the rosette at the side of the waistline. It is made of row on row of ruffled val and centered with small flowers. The long ends of narrow velvet ribbon, falling from the center of the rosette are decidedly youthful, but everybody wears them. The medallions of lace that trim the skirt and little face frills at the neck and sleeves, are especially pretty on taffeta frocks and are used on dresses for grownups, but the lace is massed in many rows.

These val lace decorations look well on nearly all the sheer cotton goods that contribute so much to the beauty of little girls' clothes in summer time. Voile is as popular as crepe, both are far more sturdy than they look. Organza always has admirers and is ex-trane and are so fashioned that the stripe of the material forms the edge of the cuff.

The suit at the right is of heavier crepe and is simpler in design, though equally as attractive as the costume at the left. The skirt is of plain material with deep plaits and is shown with a house, machine embroidered in an all-over design. The blouse, in this instance, is slightly higher waisted and is gathered into a wide belt pecially well suited to dresses for very little misses. Entire outfits are made of it in gay colors; they include the dress, knickers, and adorable little bonnets. Narrow rucks edged with the narrowest val lace, hemstitching and frills of self material are favored for their decoration.

Borrowing its colors from every tint of the rainbow and its designs from all sorts of sources, the jacket blouse has scored a success as a rival of the silk sweater for wear with plaited skirts. A blouse of this variety may well serve more than one purpose, as it is equally effective when worn with a skirt of the same material in a suit or with one of contrasting color. The illustration above shows new suits in which the skirts

American Advertises for Thrill. The other afternoon a young American rented an airplane at the Bourget field which he will utilize, he declares, to scatter handbills all over Paris, says Le Petit Parisien. A sample of these handbills reads as follows: "An American, for the first time in Paris, would like to lunch at noon next Tuesday with the most interesting anarchist in the capital; Wednesday, with a graduate student of art or music; Thursday, with an actress; Friday, with some lady who intends to commit suicide, and Saturday, with a nobleman."
