RED CLOUD TO CONTINUE BALL TEAM

Local business men met at the Chamber of Commerce rooms the first of the week and reorganized their Ball Club to play out the balance of the season.

Their aim will be to build up a local team with a view of getting a team into shape for next year and will try to develop a winning team without the necessity of hiring outside players.

They request that every one in Red Cloud or surrounding country, who would like to play ball come out to the field Friday evening, at 6 o'clock for a try out.

No donations will be asked for the balance of the season.

Boost for the home team—Red Cloud has base ball material if it is only developed. Give them your support.

While cranking a tractor last Saturday T. H. Roulier, of Campbell, was hit in the face by the crank which broke his jaw and injured his palate. He was taken to Denver Monday where specialists will work on him. He is a brother of Mose Roulier of this city.

Red Cloud Mourns Death of Warren G. Harding

This city made a last united expression of its sorrow over the death of the 29th President, Warren G. Harding, in a great mass meeting in the Auditorium last Friday.

A parade consisting of the American Legion, with their colors flying, the Masons and the business men and women of the city formed a parade at the corner of 4th and Webster and marched a block west on 4th avenue and thence south a block and east back to Webster and then north 2 blocks around the flag pole and into the auditorium where the services were held.

This service took place at the same hour as the body of the President was given to its grave in his home town of Marion, Ohio. Such observance were but a fitting climax to the 3000 mile funeral service which Mr. Harding's fellow men and women, whom he loved, accorded him all over this country. People have gathered along the railroad over which passed the funeral train, and with bowed heads have besought the Almighty to bring comfort to the aching hearts and safe guidance to the country through its crucial moment.

The program at the auditorium was very brief and simple. A large picture of the deceased was prominent in front of the footlights, draped in a large flag tied with crepe. The Community Chorus sang the late President's favorite songs in reverential manner. Rev. Fitzgerald gave the invocation; Rev. J. M. Bates gave the scripture reading. Five speakers gave different phases of Harding's life. They were: J. S. Gilham, E. J. Overing, F. E. Maurer, I. W. Edson and L. H. Blackledge. Each speaker made very fitting and eloquent remarks of Pres. Harding, from his boyhood to the presidency. They spoke of him as an enterprising young man of Marion, Ohio, where he rose from obscure poverty to world wide fame; where he and his wife had struggled together to make the "Marion Star" a success; where he had made his front porch campaigns for many offices. He was a self made man in the best sense of the phrase, and was known as Marion's first citizen.

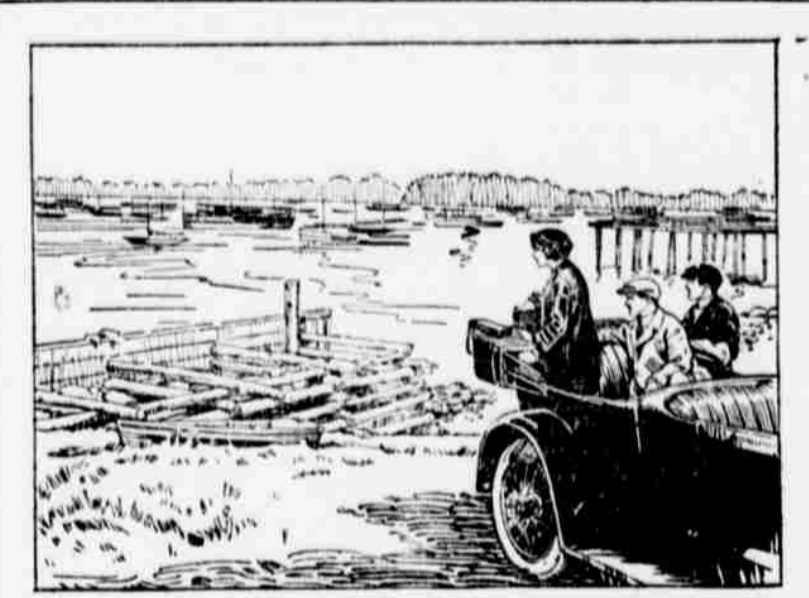

The choir sang another selection after which Rev. H. E. Tweedy pronounced the benediction.

His untimely death shocked the nation and the world. As a single mourner, the American nation stood with bowed head on Friday afternoon in reverent respect for their departed leader. And not only the American people, but also foreign powers paused to pay tribute to the illustrious dead. Impressive memorial services were held in Westminster Abbey; Berlin paid its respects; France joined in with hundreds of French civilians and former soldiers turning their faces toward Marion, Ohio, while taps were blown; even in far off Turkey memorial services were held. In every far flung possession or consulate, and on ships at sea, the same act or observance was performed. From the mighty and awe-inspiring spectacle of the State funeral in Washington, as the military might and the statesmanship of America passed in review, filling Pennsylvania avenue, street of America's immortals; from end to end with a river of humanity to watch the pageant of death,—to Marion, Ohio, where 40,000 passed the bier, in a short time, was a scene and event that America will not soon forget.

The courageous widow of the deceased, crushed back grief and fought physical weakness and weariness, borne up by the invisible arms of her love, with a strength at which men have marveled. The aged father made a valiant effort to face the situation with calmness.

Out under a quiet Ohio sky Warren G. Harding lies at rest.

Mrs. S. Fincher and son, Fountain, returned home Saturday evening from Burbank, Oklahoma, where they have been visiting for the past month with Jack Fincher and wife.
