Methodist Church Notes

H. G. WILCOX, PASTOR

That was a sumptuous cafeteria supper which was served by the west division of the ladies at last Friday night. Judging from the way the chicken disappeared there are some besides preachers who have a special proneness for that particular kind of fowl.

The Epworth League held a masquerade halloa'veen social in the church parlors on Monday night of this week. There were about fifty who were present. The evening was spent in playing various games following which the committee in charge served refreshments.

It is quite probable that special Evangelistic meetings will be held in our church in the present month. Our Evangelist will be Mrs. Wilcox whom you will be pleased to have lead us. These meetings will continue through two weeks so be prepared to start with the first service.

Another of our esteemed members has been called from our midst in the passing of Mrs. Elizabeth Potter who was one of the earliest to have her name enrolled upon our record. Because of her extreme suffering for many months death came as a sweet release. The sympathy of our people is with her bereft husband and children in their loss.

The east division served lunch out at Mr. Hunt's public sale on Wednesday of this week.

The parsonage family are entertaining the choir and its friends this week. We are pleased to have these folks with us for an evening.

Two or three little birds have told us that something is going to happen tonight in the church parlors. We shall wait and see.

A very pleasant surprise came to our congregation last Sunday morning to find hanging on the wall of the auditorium an attractive clock which was the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Crabill. Both pastor and people endeavored to express in a public manner our spirit of appreciation to these good friends for their unassuming gift. The time is here to begin serving the Lord.

What do you say to the proposal that we start out with Sunday School and church next Sunday morning to the time of the new clock? You are heartily invited to both of these morning services and to the services of the evening as well. We highly appreciate the hearty response that we are having and the cordiality manifest on every hand in the opening our pastoral work here in Red Cloud. We begin to feel decidedly at home and that we are now pretty well broken in.

Uncommon Sense By JOHN BLAKE

WASTING ENERGY

SINCE the beginning of time men have wasted millions of years of energy in trying to solve the unknowable.

The mysteries of life and death, the puzzle of space, these things are beyond the grasp of the human mind.

Let them alone. There is abundant knowledge that can be learned, useful knowledge that will help you with your career.

Study that kind of knowledge. Take mental food that your mind can digest. Take it in abundance. Work hard to get it.

But do not torture your mind with problems that are beyond your reach. A scientist, searching for truth, determines as soon as he can in what directions he can make progress. And his researches follow in these directions.

Where he sees a stone wall set up against him, he turns aside.

There is no use trying to travel any further in that way. There is plenty of work to do that can be done. And that is the work that occupies the investigator's mind.

The average man will need all his brains and all his energy studying things that can be found out. We do not mean things that are already known. If you stopped with these, the world would forever remain in its present ignorance, which is vast compared with what it will know in the future.

But where life comes from, why it flickers for a brief space and dies, and what is beyond the stars is something that until we receive hitherto unheard of light, we shall never know.

Waste no time on these problems. They are as vain as the efforts of the alchemist to turn base metals to gold, which occupied brains that might have been better used on learning more useful things.

Learn first the limitations of the subject that you study. That will dispose of much puzzle and worry, and enable you to go ahead and give it the time and thought that may add to the world's store of wisdom, and will certainly add to your own.

Blind men steal automobiles in Omaha. This is proven by the fact that someone stole a car belonging to E. L. Walters.

Some folks who don't believe in Santa Claus still believe it is possible to make the big corporations pay most of the taxes.

A Fairbury man is so stingy that he buys roasting ears with yellow kernels so his kids will think they are already buttered.

Already some Nebraska men are beginning to treat me much nicer than they used to. They expect to run for office next year.

One Nebraska editor remarks that if Henry Ford is really sincere in his desire to end poverty he will have to stop selling automobiles.

There is no such thing as an independent newspaper unless its editor is satisfied to merely record the news and never express an opinion.

Someone remarks that when a millionaire's son starts at the bottom to learn the business he only stays long enough to get his picture taken.

I used to turn my grandchildren over my knee when I whaled 'em. But they got to biting my leg so bad that I had to turn 'em over a barrel.

Some highbrow rises to remark that only four people out of a hundred have good sense. Maybe so, but I have never been able to find the other three.

A Geneva man refused to take his wife to the hospital when the doctor advised it. He said he could get a brand new wife cheaper than he could repair the old one.

Pool tables, picture shows and other such things may be desirable additions to the modern church, as some advocate, but it is difficult for us old-fashioned folks to think so.

A minister at the recent Methodist conference says that what the church needs most nowadays is fewer men at desks and managing drives and more men preaching the gospel.

How much merchandise did you ever buy from a merchant on account of his plastering the highways with road signs. As a matter of fact, you are more likely to cuss him for musing up the landscape.

In some sections of the country child labor is an evil but most children, nowadays, don't labor enough.

A cynical Nebraska editor says a prominent citizen is a man who always has a speech concealed in his system and is ready to let it off any time.

Mother gives the young ones their own way so she gets the flowers and the poetry. Dad wants them to show a streak of sense occasionally. He gets the roasting.

Every person who seeks the free use of space in newspapers is horrified when he discovers that "they don't want to print the news."

I acknowledge the fact that I am a bone-headed old gronch but my nation is that the national, state and local governments have enough to do looking after our general welfare without providing a nurse to tell us when little Willie needs a tooth filled or supplying us with swimming pools, dance pavilions and other publicly owned recreations.

Help your Moulters Mout

If you want your hens to moult naturally—
If you want them back on the egg job promptly—fall and winter laying—
Then you must make sure that your moulters are healthy and hungry.
They must eat lots, and be able to digest what they eat.

That's just what Dr. Hess Poultry Pan-a-co-s does for your moulting flock.
