PRINCE KALANIANA'OLE

Philanthropic Efforts of "Prince Cupid" to Bear Fruit

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

AMERICA is making a belated effort to save the Hawaiian race from extinction by carrying out the plans of the late Jonah Kūhiō Kalaniana'ole, for the last 20 years of his life a delegate to congress from the Territory of Hawaii.

Here in the house we called him "Prince," not because of his former title but because he was a prince of good fellows.

An act of congress has created a Hawaiian homes commission and established in the treasury of the territory a revolving fund known as the Hawaiian home loan fund of $1,000,000 and more as working capital.

He was fond of athletics and sport, excelling in football and rowing. He was an expert horseman and there was nothing he enjoyed more keenly than going with the cowboys after wild cattle and horses on the rugged slopes of Mauna Kea.

His prospects were brought to an abrupt change by the overthrow of the Hawaiian monarchy in 1893, when the republic of Hawaii was established.

He returned to his island home in the fall of 1901 and in 1902 was elected for his first term. He was a reluctant candidate, for he believed he could do more for his people at home than at Washington.

Prince Kūhiō died at his home on beautiful and far-famed Waikiki. It was his dying wish—for he was the soul of modesty and simplicity—that his funeral should be free from all pomp.

To Save Native Hawaiian Race

PRINCESS KALANIANA'OLE

The body was removed to the old throne room of the palace, where it lay in state on the very spot where he had knelt as a boy when he was created a royal prince of the realm.

No death in all the annals of Hawaii's touching and pathetic history caused more profound sorrow or called forth more expressions of deep and genuine regret than did that of Prince Kalaniana'ole.

The army furnished a military escort appropriate to a general and the navy furnished an escort similar to that at the burial of an admiral.

It was estimated that at the time Captain Cook discovered the Hawaiian Islands, then known as the Sandwich Islands, there were 400,000 pure-blooded Hawaiians on the eight islands.

This vanishing race of Hawaiians is an attractive race, and they were once a great people. When Napoleon was thundering across the continent of Europe, Kamehameha I, the first king of the Hawaiians, a soldier and a statesman, was organizing the kingdom of Hawaii.

The Hawaiian, tall, athletic, handsome, gentle, esthetic, can toll hard on occasion, but nature and his environment have unfitted him for sustained labor and drudgery.

Because of this, when American planters, about fifty years ago, began growing sugar on large estates in the island, they had to send abroad for laborers.

The Asiatic population do a large part of the agricultural work. They supply the labor gangs to the great sugar plantations, which occupy the best lands in the islands.

The first census was made in 1832. The population was then 130,313, mostly Polynesians. Then the population steadily decreased year by year until 1872, when there were only 56,897 people.

Naturally, these newcomers Orientals do not make living conditions easier for the Hawaiians. For many years they have felt themselves a doomed people.

A native Hawaiian, under the act, is "Any descendant of not less than half the blood of the races inhabiting the Hawaiian Islands previous to 1778."

The first Hawaiian colony under the act has been established on Molokai. It consists of fifteen families of pure Hawaiian blood.

"Thou shalt Americanize Hawaii and keep alive the American institutions in this, thy native country. The burden is upon you.

"Thou shalt love thy race and love thy land or you will be an outcast. You must be a true Hawaiian before you can become a true American.

"Thou shalt conserve the lands for the race and incidentally for thy posterity.

"Thou shalt support the Hawaiian homes commission in reaching a success of the rehabilitation of thy race on the land of Hawaii.

"Thou shalt increase thy birth rate and strive to bring many children to healthy manhood and thereby decrease thy deaths.

"Thou shalt 'stop, look and listen' and take an active interest and a full part in the government of thy native land. Thou must ever keep alive with the times."
