Economy

It is a wise woman who discovers early in her career as a housewife that pure white fabrics are more economical for household purposes than those of colors.

Always pure white tablecloths, doilies and runners are the best. If they are colored the color fades in time, leaving an unattractive result. Moreover, if they are colored they cannot be boiled, and after all boiling is the most satisfactory method for keeping cottons or linens spotless and sweet.

Another thing to bear in mind: Colored fabrics sometimes "run" in the washing. This makes it necessary to wash them separately from the white fabrics, and that means more work on washday.

The pure white apron has the advantage to the scrupulous housewife of showing soil. You can always tell when it should be discarded for a clean one. And the pure white apron can be washed with other white clothes and never takes that dingy look that comes to colored aprons when they become faded.

Word has been received that Mr. and Mrs. Carl Paulson, whose wedding was solemnized June 3, are stopping at the Biltmore in New York. They have just come down from Cape Ann, and will go to East Orange, N. J., and then to Rye, N. Y., to visit Mrs. Paulson's sister, Mrs. Robert Forgan, and Mr. For-

Little Theater Head From Cleveland Visits Here

Frederick McConnell, director of the Playhouse in Cleveland, is spending a week in Omaha with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. McConnell, of Omaha, on his way to the Pacific coast. Mr. McConnell will be in Berkeley for a time, where he formerly taught at the University of California, and he will visit friends, and may help with some of the summer productions at the Greek theater. He will also visit Gilmore Brown's Little theater in Pasadena, one of the most successful in the country, and the Community theater in Hollywood, which is managed by Miss Neely Dixon. Miss Dixon is one of the few women who have made good as theater directors. Her theater is of especial interest because she draws very largely on the motion picture actors for her talent, and they support the theater with enthusiasm. William DeMille is one of the directors.

The chief thing that I have accomplished this winter with the Playhouse in Cleveland is to take it out of the class of the usual little theater and give it a definite place in the community," Mr. McConnell said. "I decided that two or three performances of plays were not enough, so we gave 12 performances of each of the 16 bills we put on, more than any other little theater has attempted to far as I know. We are now in the semi-professional class. Next year I shall have three professional assistants mixed with the amateur group, which is a strong one in Cleveland."

Mr. McConnell also said that a scholarship had been arranged for a young man who had proved his ability to spend next winter as an instructor of the playhouse, studying the technique of production and of acting. Mr. McConnell thinks that the Little theater all over the country should seize the chance to be schools for dramatic study and he sees an opportunity for young women as well as young men.

The biggest success of the season at the Cleveland playhouse was Eugen O'Neill's "Beyond the Horizon," a play which was a commercial failure in New York. Marlowe's "Faustus" came next in popularity, which surprised even the producers. Mr. McConnell attributed the success of this revival to the fact that the actors spoke the blank verse rapidly and in a conversational tone in the Elizabethan manner, rather than in the stentorian and measured utterance which actors of the last century used. He considered that it indicated the disgust of the public with the fact that drama which has gotten away from true life values and from beauty and sincerity.

Two of their bills this winter were marionette productions, less elaborate than Tony Sarg's, but on the same order. Mr. McConnell thinks the success of marionettes lies in their interest for children.

Summer Fabrics Shown in Shops. Charming frocks for warm weather wear are made of blue Swiss, dotted with tiny white dots. Much narrow lace is used on these frocks, both Irish and valenciennes.

Bottle, almond, Sinn Fein and water green are among the shades particularly stressed. Jade beads are worn, whether they come under any of these qualifications or not.

Green underwear, as one might imagine, is another manifestation of a return of green, which is rampant in drawing room furnishings as well as in one's wardrobes.

A lovely frock of beige crepe is striped up and down with inch-wide ribbon of a darker shade. The cape that goes with the frock shows the same striping.

Lace negligees are bound with ribbon and worn over a silk slip of the ribbon color.

Changeable silks have been in the shops for ages. But now one can buy really changeable cotton fabric. The shimmer and glint of the changing colors is really quite lovely.

Silk negligees, sometimes of soft changeable blue and mauve, and blue or yellow and pink, or trimmed with much narrow, cream-colored Valenciennes lace. Sometimes narrow black lace is used on pink silk.

Freckles Need Not Annoy You Any Longer. By JEAN TRUE.

Freckles will answer all questions on household art which are addressed to her at The Bee.

The deeper layers of the epidermis contain the coloring matter of the skin. This coloring matter is deposited in the granules of the epidermis and give what is called the complexion. If the skin is exposed to the sun's rays the coloring matter turns darker and is called tan. In some people this pigment collects in small spots called freckles.

Some authorities claim that fatty or carbonaceous matter is deposited beneath the skin and when exposed to the sun's rays produces freckles. Such authorities think this fatty deposit is a result of indigestion. If this be true one should be very careful of the diet and should take plenty of exercise in order to help the skin perform its normal functions. The skin should be kept clean by frequent bathing, the pores made active by friction with a towel not too coarse and hard to produce proper reaction in rubbing.

Freckles may be prevented by wearing a brown veil when walking or riding in direct sunlight. This is the only sure preventive. The old saying, wash your face with dew before the sun is up has no foundation. There is nothing miraculous about the dew on the grass; if freckles annoy you use the cream to help you to remove them. To remove freckles it becomes necessary to work through the outer layers of the epidermis to reach the discolorations; this may be done by use of astringents or mineral emulsions and should be done only on the advice of a skin specialist.

There are some simple home remedies that will help remove freckles and not injure the skin to any serious extent. Make a solution of fresh buttermilk and fresh grated horseradish; let stand overnight, strain through a coarse cloth and wash the face night and morning with this solution.

Squeeze the juice of one lemon and mix with one-half glass of water. Wash the face two or three times each day with this solution, or dissolve the juice of one lemon with early, eight pieces William and Mary Italian design, worth $225.00. While they last..... $113.75

The above recipe not for regular use and is for removal of freckles only. Avoid using alum, mineral drugs such as iodine, mercury, bismuth and other injurious substances; it is often best to use home remedies instead of patenting quack beauty doctors or purchasing widely advertised preparations of ingredients of which you know nothing. Use home recipes that have been approved by good authority or consult your physician.

Freckles are often found on faces of young people but usually pass away as they grow older. Perhaps the wisest choice is to pay no attention to them.

ADVERTISMENT. Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength.

This preparation for the treatment of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and re-apply it. Squeeze the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lightest freckles vanishing entirely. Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

Cowardice Makes Your Troubles Seem Worse

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX. There is an old legend that whoever slept on Lycorrea, one of the two summits of Mount Parnassus, became either inspired or mad. The meaning of this legend has always seemed to me to be merely this: When it comes to a difficult test the strong will come out inspired with new strength and powers, while the weak will lose what little poise and sanity and strength he has.

I know a woman who has been tried. Life has not dealt gently with her, but most of her troubles come from her own nature and her own way of meeting her problems. She has never hung back her head and come out to grapple with difficulty. But instead, lowering her head sadly, she has looked down contemplating her own misfortunes.

Perhaps if she had once looked ahead and tried to solve her own problems they would have been conquered. But she has always waited for things to work out, for some miracle to bring her happiness for what she feels is a square deal.

Suppose a coward slept in a house reputed to be haunted. It there a chance in the world that he wouldn't see all sorts of terrible spectres? And the fact that they were conjured up by his imagination wouldn't make them any more endurable or any the less terrible to deal with. He, like the famed wretch who slept on Lycorrea, would come out of his ordeal mad.

But suppose a man of strength and sanity spent a night in a "haunted house." Human imagination might be put to a strain by creaking doors and branches swaying in the wind and tapping against window panes. But calm sanity would be able to arrive at some explanation for most of the terrifying noises.

As we go through life, the weak and terrified let each difficulty sap more of energy, more of faith and more of confidence. But the strong, even though they find the fight hard, make it with confidence in the strength they have and the greater strength that will be given them.

"The living sense grows by exercise." And so by enduring and clearing the way sanity man comes into his strength.

After all we are not taxed beyond our strength. Sometimes we think situations are too hard to bear. But almost invariably when we meet them sanely the difficulties sink away.

To go to the mountain top and to sleep there in storm and cloud is the portion of any courageous soul. Even cowards are sometimes forced to do this. And the choice we all have is how staunchly we shall endure and what we propose to let our struggle bring us—not what we shall let it do to us.

Before using soap take the wrap-off and give the cake time to harden. It will last twice as long.

An Open Letter to the Women of Omaha who are NOT Patrons of The Pantorium

Ladies:

Subject: Your Patronage.

We want it! And I am going to tell you why we should have it.

For a quarter of a century I have been striving to perfect an organization in which the people of Omaha and vicinity could have every confidence; a place where they could send their clothes, rugs, draperies, etc., to be cleaned or dyed, and feel that they were in safe hands, and where the work would be the best that could possibly be done.

I think The Pantorium is such an organization.

The one big reason why you are not patrons of ours is because you do not know us and do not know how good our Cleaning and Dyeing is.

We advertise to get you to TRY US ONCE, after that our work and service must bring you back and hold you. We have hundreds of customers who have been with us constantly for from fifteen to twenty-five years, so we have little fear but that we can keep you once you are started.

You will find our prices no higher than other legitimate cleaners charge, but that is about as far as the comparison goes. Won't you make us prove it?

DO uglas 0963 will bring a delivery car to your door promptly, or if you live in South Omaha call MA rket 1283.

Why not have the best?

Sincerely yours,

Guy Siggitt

President for 25 years.
