New York Cotton.

New York, June 22.—The tendency was lower in quiet, rather featureless trading in today's cotton market. There was enough absorption to meet pressure from local longs and the south, which were again present as a result of the continued favorable weather in the belt. First prices were 5 to 12 points net lower and after its call the market met increased offerings which quickly broke it to a level off about 20 to 20 points net from Wednesday's final bids. There was fair demand from Wall street shorts and the trade in the afternoon. Final prices were

The New York Cimes. By ALEXANDER DANA NOYES.

Omaha Bee Leased Wire,

New York, June 22.—The effect of the lower reserve bank rate, as announced after the close of business.

Wednesday was visible in today's markets for money and for investment bonds. It caused no very important change in either, but the street rate both for commercial paper and for short-term loans on collateral declined ¼ of 1 per cent, and four of the Liberty loans went above their previous high record price.

Exemption is influence.

The fact that all of these 4% per cent. United States war loans should now be selling a considerable fraction over par is on the whole, a logical recognition of the exemption from taxation naturally emphasizes such influence as it does in the still larger premium on New York city 4% per vent. Behind even these considerations, an influence which is likely to become more positive as time goes on, is the extremely skillful policy of Secretary Mellon in his refunding program.
