Close Races Difficult to Determine Accurately-California Mentor's Suggestion Finds Favor.

By WALTER ECKERSALL. Before the various sectional interollegiate track and field games are eld next year and the national collegiate on June 9, efforts will be made to have better accommodaprint and hurdle races.

In the eastern intercollegiate, held at Harvard last May, and in the national collegiate, decided on Stagg field June 17, the races were so close that the judges were unable to determine the place winners with any degree of certainty. In fact t is no secret that atheletes were lost" in both meets.

As many as seven runners were meets. It happened that all racers were of about equal ability, with the result they were on the tape at practically the same time. The judges were able to catch the runners on the sides of the track, but they "lost" the men in the middle lanes.

Suggestions for Changes.

Coaches are seeking some way of rectifying such mistakes in the future, with the result many sugges-tions have been offered. Walter Christic, coach of the University of California team, which won the eastern and intercollegiate and the national collegiate games, has offered a suggestion which is meeting with

The Bears' mentor believes the best way to overcome any such repetitions is to have two stands built and set back about 15 yards from each side of the track. If necessary Christie said, a section of the grandstand should be used if the track is close to the structure. These stands should be high enough to permit the judges to look down and out at the Coaches were bitter in their criticism for permitting this man to perform and also of their actions in judging the event. Regardless of what record the performer might have made, it would not have counted, and his work only detracted from that of the two men who tied for first place. A rule will undoubtedly be injected next year to prevent such an occurrence at future meets.

Rules Often Violated

Rules Often Violated.

Although a rule exists which forbids a runner to take the pole by cutting in on the inside, the edict has been violated so many times this year that some mentors intend to ask for a more strict ruling. It happens that on some occasions the pole hall over the fence for two more and runner may swing wide enough to the game. Score: permit the man behind to cut in and take the pole, but it more often happens that the rear runner tries to run brough and squeeze the field out. This is contrary to the rule, which states a man must take the pole from Carr. 20 the outside and he at least two strides advance before he cuts in. This has been a trick of one of the leading teams in the middle west for a number of years.

Fate Unkind to Club Owners in Junior League

Death Has Claimed Several Prominent American League Moguls in Last Few Years -ClevelandLost Three.

By I. E. SANBORN.

Death has been particularly unind to the American league in takng away so many of the highest type of good citizens and good sportsmen who have been included in the roster of its club owners.

The loss of James C. Dunn, late owner of the Cleveland club, will be . mourned by the entire baseball world throughout which he was known by reputation at least. This is the third time Cleveland fans have known grief over the loss by death of a sterling character. The first time was at the death of J. H. Kilfoyle, who was associated with Charles W. Somers in the days when clean sportsmen with good nerves were required to back the league through the baseball war. The second time Cleveland mourned was at the death of Ray Chapman, one of the world's greatest shortstops and a great credit to the game personally.

Another death within the year which has removed a veteran sportsman from the American league ranks was that of Benjamin F. Schibe, a baseball pioneer in more ways than one. Ben Schibe also was the first to risk investing in a steel and con-crete baseball stand, which was named after him.
