

Farm Bloc Will Attend Harding "Peace" Dinner

Unity in Party Aim of President-Agrarians' Legislative Program Is Same as Administration's.

By GEORGE F. AUTHIER. Washington Correspondent Omaha Bee, Washington, June 29.—(Special Telegram.)—The dinner which President Harding is to give to members of the "farm bloc" and other men prominently identified with agricultural interests and organizations, is regarded as a political gesture of unusual significance. It aims to bring about a rapprochement between the administration and the "farm bloc," which has not existed since a few months ago, when the president let it be known he disapproves of "farm blocs" or "blobs" of any character as tending to destroy the unity of any political party.

Since then it has developed that the things for which the farm bloc has stood have been very largely the things for which the administration has been contending. Under the leadership of the Senator Capper of Kansas, the "farm bloc" has been militant and more "regular" than it was under the leadership of Senator Kenyon. It has appeared to administration leaders and to Republicans in the "farm bloc" itself, that it would result in better legislation and in more unity in the republican organization if the administration and the farm leaders got together. The White House dinner tonight is in the form of an "olive branch" designed to bring both ends of Pennsylvania avenue together.

For example, it is pointed out that the tariff rates for which the farm bloc has been contending, meet the approval of the administration, and it is deemed better politics for the party to go before the public in the approaching elections with an evidence of harmony and allow the republican members of the "farm bloc" to claim the achievements of the "farm bloc" as party achievements, which they really are.

Among other things which will be discussed will be the matter of the extension of rural credits, in which the administration is vitally interested, and the appointment of an additional member of the federal reserve board. It is understood the president will not appoint anyone to this position who does not meet the approval of the leaders of the "farm bloc."

The president has still another question which he would like to discuss with the "farm bloc" members, and that is the ship subsidy bill. The president is interested in this above everything else. He has been disturbed by reports that members from the middle west find opposition among their people to this measure. He wants to place the whole question of salvaging the American merchant marine before the farm leaders.

Will Explain Subsidy. The American Farm bureau has already approved the ship subsidy plan, but it is understood that the action taken by J. R. Howard, representing this organization, has met with severe criticism, notably from the Pierce publications in Iowa, and that this question was reflected in the recent Iowa campaign which resulted in the senatorial nomination of Smith Brookhart. The president will have the shipping board representatives at the dinner and they will tell the "farm bloc" group just what the situation is in the shipping world. It is well known the board and the administration is in possession of facts concerning the efforts that are being made abroad to throttle American shipping which cannot be disclosed.

The "olive branch" which President Harding is extending does not mean that he has changed his attitude toward the danger inherent in the separation of the country into "blobs," but is an indication that the work of this particular "farm bloc" is in well with the administration plans.

Grocers Said to Be Selling Waste Vinegars for Cider. Vermillion, S. D., June 29.—(Special Telegram.)—A recent investigation by the state food and drug commissioner shows that misrepresentation is being practiced by some grocers of the state in the sale of vinegar. Molasses vinegar and waste vinegar have been sold as cider vinegar when the latter was called for in bulk. In practically all cases the charge for the cheaper product was the same as genuine cider vinegar may be bought for at the stores handling this product.

Two Young Girls Held on Charge of Shoplifting

Complainant Asserts One Lass Said Stepmother Taught Her to Steal.

Two girls, 16 years old each, were arrested in the Hayden Bros. store, Thursday afternoon on complaint of Sam Cohn that they were caught in the act of shoplifting. One girl gave the name Helen Godwin, 1712 California street, when she was booked on a charge of petit larceny. The other girl, whose name was not booked, was taken on a secret mission to her home which it is said detectives planned to raid in an effort to uncover stolen clothing. Police said she is Marie Johnson. The other girl, police allege, is Eva Metzger, stepdaughter of Mrs. John Metzger, who, when taken before Chief of Detectives Van Deusen, gave the name of Ruth Larsen, 414 North Eighteenth street. Cohn told police the girl said her stepmother had taught her to steal. Van Deusen asserted, however, that the girl said her mother told her "If you can't get pretty things any other way, you must go and steal them."

The woman told Van Deusen, he said, that her husband makes $50 a week but spends most of it on his automobile.

RADIO Additional Unit for Wider Range

New Type of Amplifier Will Increase Range, But Not Volume.

For those who already have a vacuum tube detector and wish to increase their range, without any great increase in loudness, the unit to be described can be recommended. This unit can also be used in connection with a detector and radio frequency amplifier in order to hear stations that would otherwise be unavailable. If you have thought of adding to your apparatus from time to time, it is well to make your panels of uniform size and arrange the binding posts so that the connections can be made with the shortest possible length of wire. The average experimenter will find little trouble in constructing this amplifier unit, but great care should be used in arranging and connecting the different parts.

As has been noted in previous articles, the transformer should be selected with care, for good radio frequency transformers are much scarcer than good ones of the audio frequency type. Solder Joints. Make all wiring as straight and as short as possible. If in any way avoidable never run wires parallel, and endeavor to make all crossings at right angles. Be sure and solder all joints.

The entire unit, using the best materials, need not cost over $20. This price includes a bakelite panel, vacuum tube, tube socket, rheostat, radio frequency transformer, eight binding posts, and a 45-volt B battery. The same A battery that you use for your other tube, or tubes, may be used with this amplifier. It is recommended that the A and B battery binding posts be located on the transformer shelf, so that the battery wires will not be crossing around in front of the instrument.

The same design may be used in constructing an audio frequency amplifying panel, the only difference being the type of transformer and the connection. In this case the Washington, June 29.—New radio beacon stations are soon to be installed by the lighthouse service at Boston, Nantucket, Cape Charles, Columbia river, entrance to Puget Sound, Delaware Bay, Los Angeles and Blunt's Reef, California, the Commerce department announced today. Three other radio beacons have been in operation in the vicinity of New York harbor at Ambrose, Fire Island and Sea Girt, for over a year. Many foreign ships have been equipped with radio direction finders and are calling for radio beacon service as they approach American shores. American shipping companies, the department said, are also awakening to the importance of using the radio direction finder to determine their locations in time of fog and distress.
