Americans Still Duped by French Antique Dealers

More Than 3,000 of Marie Antoinette's Beds in United States, Says Writer.

Paris, July 8 .- "In America there are more than 3,000 beds and 10,000 harpischords which belonged to Marie Antoinette," writes Clement Vautel in Le Journal.

"It has been estimated," he con-tinues, "that 30,000 Corot landscapes have prominent places there n public or private collections.

"About 50 times a year a master-piece of Rembrandt or Murillo, or of Velasquez is discovered in a garret and estimated at two or three mil-

This condition Vautel and other Parisian newspaper satirists who have recently dwelt heavily on the theme ascribed to an amount of fake antique selling in Paris shops and at Paris auctions that increases in volume and profit as years go by.

Much of the cleverest work of antique swindlers is "put over" on American buyers, who, according to the satirists, will pay any price for something "historical," even if the "history" was acquired by strongarm methods in the workshops of the swindling dealers.

"From year to year there are auctioned off at the Hotel Drouot," Vautel continues, "thousands and thousands of chairs re-covered by antique tapestry, and a formidable quantity of candelebra and grandfathers' clocks.

"For a while this commerce in bric-a-brae went on smoothly. But at last a check-

China Drawing Nearer to Civil War Than Unity

Foreigners, Seeing Things Go From Bad to Worse, Prepare to Leave Country.

By CHARLES DAILEY. Tsingtao, Shantung, July 8 .- It has been just one surprise after another to the Chinese, this taking over of the Shantung railway and the recovery of Tsingtao and the Kiaochou leased territory. And the end is not yet. Every day some new point comes up. A few Japanese troops have gone home—mere "face pigdin"—but many more still remain, while the gendarmerie, more autocratic in a way than the actual Japanese soldier, sit on the job all the way up to Tsinan, at the other end of the line, and they appear to be determined to stay, for the protection of Japanese interests, already become almost as great in Shantung as in Manchuria—more so if one excludes the railways. No doubt China is getting as much as it deserves, for less than half the provinces are remitting to Pekin. Corruption stalks on all hands, Pekin wallows in the official mire of its own incompetence, continually levying new forms of taxes revolts among the long-suffering, easy-going people. Meantime China draws nearer to civil war than to reunification. Meantime, also, for-eigners display more uneasiness and seeing things going from bad to worse prepare to send their families to the seaports and to go themselves the moment white troops are with-drawn or extra-territoriality abol-
