New York, July 15.—The trend was irregular under week-end evening up in the short cotton market. The list sagged and bulged elightly alternately. Sentiment was badly mixed, bigger operators feeling little disposed to make extensive commitments on either the bull or bear side. There was some little support on the theory that railroad strike news was a listle more optimistle. The later trading was featureless, but the market steadled somewhat after the decline amounted to 2 to 15 points, due mostly to local liquidation. Outside buying orders subsequently helped to austain the list, and the close was fairly steady, net unchanged to 5 points lower.
