

Howell Is Modest in Speaking of Primary Victory

Says Result Was Largely an Economic Expression of the People—Issues Statement of Views.

R. B. Howell, the republican nominee for United States senate Wednesday made the following statement: "The campaign that is just closed is quite in accord with the character of the people of Nebraska. It was devoid of political fireworks, recriminations and mudslinging. "Nebraska is at once conservative and forward looking. Its tendency is to advance. Not to retreat. The people resent attacks upon the direct primary. They resent the idea of the elimination of competition in railroad rates as provided in the Esch-Cummins act. They are instinctively individualists, convinced in an uncrystallized way that this principle of noncompetition applied to all other activities would mean socialism. "Again, Nebraskans are, to a great extent, protectionists, but are opposed to a radical tariff policy as they are to free trade. "They have also been converted to prohibition largely as an economic measure and regard the movement for light wines and beer, if successful, a certain end to the unquestioned advantages which the state has enjoyed under the eighteenth amendment. "In short, the result of yesterday's primary was largely an economic expression of which I, as a candidate, was the beneficiary."

Too Much "Harmony," Butler Wires Bryan

Dan Butler, defeated candidate for the democratic nomination for governor, yesterday wired this message to Charles Bryan of Lincoln, successful candidate: "Congratulations—too much 'harmony.' However, I still have my coal yard. Good luck. "Lincoln's municipal coal yard, established by City Commissioner Charles Bryan, was ruled illegal in the state supreme court Wednesday, and an order issued remanding the case back to the Lancaster county district court for permanent injunction restraining the city of Lincoln from operating a coal yard. Thus the Butler comment."

Amplifier May Be Used With Crystal

Experiments Conducted in Chicago Prove That Additional Detector Set Operates Like Audion.

Chicago, July 20.—Amplification—the desire of every amateur owning a radio receiving set possible on a crystal detector, with additional crystal detectors as amplifiers in place of audion bulbs, according to a statement today by a Chicago radio fan. His experiments, he said, had proven conclusively that the strength of incoming signals on a crystal set could not only be increased at least from 50 to 75 per cent, but that distortion, which usually accompanies the amplified signal on the bulb set, is entirely eliminated. Explaining that while the wiring diagram used was not a standard one, it differed in some respects from that used by another experimenter and by which he was unable to gain results, the radio fan said that the only equipment required in addition to the regular crystal set included two audio frequency transformers, a small telephone condenser, two crystal detectors and a 22-volt "B" battery. The battery, it was explained, was necessary to furnish current to help the weak incoming radio signals push their way through the amplifying transformers and detectors.

Experiment Successful. "While many radio writers contend that the set using the crystal detectors cannot be amplified as has been done in this case," the experimenter said, "it is possible to do so. Whether a loud speaker could be used with this set I have not been able to determine, but I believe that this would be possible near a broadcasting station. I am located seven miles from a station and receive music and voice so clearly and distinctly that it seems that the player or speaker were in the next room. "While, of course, the range of the set is not greatly increased by the amplification, several miles are added. How much farther it is possible to receive can be determined only by experimentation. It may also be possible to use a loop aerial in place of the regular outdoor antenna. This also can be determined by experimentation.

"In hooking the instruments together, very little trouble will be experienced. Any form of tuning inductance may be used, but better results will be obtained with a loose coupler, as it will permit closer tuning, an important factor. The leads from the crystals set usually hooked to the phones are fastened to the primary binding posts of one amplifying transformer. Across this primary is shunted a small telephone condenser. Another condenser is shunted across the secondary of this transformer.

Care in Wiring. "One lead from the secondary of the transformer goes to the second detector, while the other goes to one binding post of the primary of the second transformer. To the other binding post of the primary of the second transformer is hooked the lead to the third detector. The second detector is connected with one binding post of the secondary of the second transformer. The other side of the secondary goes to the phones, which in turn are hooked to the third detector, completing the circuit. "The negative side of the battery is hooked about half way on to the wire leading from the first transformer to the second transformer, while the positive side is fastened to the primary of the second transformer to which is hooked the third detector. "One point to bear in mind is this: The second detector must not be carried to the primary of the second transformer, but must go to the secondary. If this is not done, it will be found that the signals will not carry through the second transformer. "The most sensitive crystals must be used, galena being preferable. However, if a very sensitive crystal is used in the first detector, it will be found that the amplifying detectors will not require ones so sensitive. Crystals may be tested by a buzzer. "An 11-plate or 23-plate variable condenser, inserted in the ground lead, will greatly aid in tuning. "If the experimenter follows the diagram outlined, he will find that the incoming signals have greatly increased in sound."

Interlocutory Injunction.

The Court further finds that immediate and irreparable injury, loss or damage will result to the plaintiff in that there will be great loss and destruction of its property, wrongful and unlawful interference with the conduct of the plaintiff's business as a common carrier of interstate commerce and of United States mail, and that plaintiff will be prevented from performing its duties under the Interstate Commerce Act and other Federal Statutes applicable to railroads; that there will be injury to or loss of life of plaintiff's employees unless the interlocutory injunction of this Court be issued, and for all of which injuries and wrongs, there is no adequate remedy at law; and for said causes and reasons, the Court finds that it is necessary that the interlocutory injunction of this Court issue herein:
