

Letters From All Parts of Russia Tell of Horrors

Whole Families Devour Each Other Until Only One or Two Left—Even Corpses Eaten.

Riga, July 29.—Postal service between Latvia and Soviet Russia has improved greatly during the last month and letters written in Siberia have been delivered to the addresses in Riga within two weeks of their being mailed.

Commenting upon these letters the Rigasche Rundschau, the oldest German paper in the Baltic states, states that these letters, coming as they do from all portions of the former Russian empire, are the last piece of evidence needed to prove that the famine has now engulfed practically the whole of Russia.

The contents of other letters stagger the imagination, but the recipients believe every word, for the letters come from life-long friends and from near relatives. The majority of the letters come from portions of the Ukraine and the Crimea and the western portion of Siberia, districts where up to the present time the American relief administration have not been able to perfect their organization owing to the lack of bolshevik government control.

Communists Exterminated. In these districts bands of out-cast peasants and other anti-bolshevik groups have gone from village to village and exterminated the communists. Proponents of Soviet Russia who favor the recognition of the bolshevik regime before the entire country collapses into a state of anarchy will be surprised to hear that soviet newspapers themselves admit that the real authority of the government in many districts only extends within an area of 10 versts on each side of the railroad.

Roundup Will Reproduce Old Range of 50 Years Ago. True Historical Representation of Early Prairie Life, Including Deadwood Stage Holdup, to Be Given at Sunderland, Neb., August 21-24.

Sunderland, Neb., July 29.—(Special)—Whooping war cries and staccato rifle shots will pierce the quiet air here on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, August 21-24, when the Plate River roundup and Pioneers' Days exhibition will be staged.

The roundup and exhibition will be a true reproduction of the old range 50 years ago. There will be 40 Indians from the Pine Ridge reservation and innumerable cowboys and cowgirls.

The famous Deadwood stage coach will take part in the first real attempt at creating a reunion of the old pioneers of the west.

This will not be just an ordinary wild west show, the officials in charge say, but a true historical reproduction of every-day life on the prairies, showing the work, play and hardships encountered by pioneers who turned a wilderness into a community of peace and happiness.

Will Ride Wild Horse. On Monday, August 21, there will be a big parade at 10:30 in the morning. A wild horse will be ridden just before lunch.

At 1:30 in the afternoon the old Deadwood stage coach will be attacked by the Indians, followed by a congress of the rough riders of the west, riding bad horses and mules, steer bull dogging, an oldtime cowgirl race for contestants over 25 years of age, an Indian, cowboy and cowboy hurdle race, a chariot race, an open maverick race, a novelty race, a fight between the pony express riders and Indians, and at 5 in the evening the Indians will stage their war dances and other fantastic dances of their religious rites before the Christian missionaries came into the plains.

On Tuesday, the second day, another big parade and wild horse riding will be staged before lunch, to be followed by a realistic stage robbery, another congress of rough riders of the west, a race for cowgirls between 18 and 25 years old, a race for cowgirls under 16 years old, steer bull dogging, riding of wild horses and mules, calf roping, Roman races, wild horse race and a maverick race for entries 20 years old and under. Indian dances will conclude the day.

Rough Riders Race. On Wednesday the third day, the big parade and wild horse riding will be repeated, in the morning, while in the afternoon there will be a rough riders' race on a rough track of two miles, the old roundup in reality with more than 2,000 cattle shown, calf branding, congress of rough riders of the west, steer bull dogging, maverick race for cowboys 50 years old and older, Indian pony race, wild horse and steer riding, novelty race and Indians on the game trail and the hunt of the white man's buffalo when steel was unknown to them. Indian dances will conclude the day.

The parade and wild horse riding will open the festivities of the fourth day, Thursday, before lunch, to be followed in the afternoon with Indians attacking the old Deadwood stage coach, congress of rough riders of the west, chariot race, wild horse and mule riding, calf roping, steer bull dogging, potato race, square race and other races.

Indian Massacre. The exhibition and roundup will close with the most sensational and exciting event of the four days, the Indian massacre.

J. L. Case of North Platte, a rough rider of the old school, is president of the roundup and exhibition; Frank Coker, one of John Bratt's old cowboys, Sunderland, Neb., vice president; John Harshfield, one of the old range riders of Sutherland, a secretary, and Earl Brownfield, a native son, Hershey, Neb., treasurer.

"Come and camp with us on the old range and meet the old pioneers," says President Case. "Camping privileges go with the admissions. Tourists are especially invited to come and camp during the show. Rough riding in the modern as well as the old time way will be staged.

Realistic Stage Setting. "The old Texas trail herd, with horse cavy, trail wagon and full equipment will be shown. "Our showmen are the old pioneer cowboys, Indians, United States rangers, trappers and miners. "The stage setting is in the heart of the Old John Bratt cattle range on a beautiful spring creek, a natural amphitheater, making all our plays as near real as possible. "Eats of all kinds will be served. Bring your bed. Campers can buy rough provisions and fresh beef on the grounds. "Leave the smoke, dust and hot pavements of the city and enjoy four days of a real wild west show while out on a picnic and camping trip. "Come and see the Indians."

Persons of 100 Will Be Common. Doctor Predicts Better Care of Babies Is Producing Finer Generation, Is American Specialist's Belief.

London, July 29.—Centenarians will be commonplace in the next generation, for the children of today are far better and finer than the children of yesteryear, according to Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin, American child specialist, whose work is attracting considerable attention in London.

"I don't see why every ordinary person should not live to be a centenarian," Dr. Chapin said. "If we give babies the right start 100th birthdays in the next generation will not be the sensation they are today."

"Scientists have discovered that the lower animals live the period it takes for their bones to develop. "It takes human beings 20 years for full bone growth and on this natural basis the average healthy life should be about 100 years."

"The reason so few people live a century is principally because of the social environment of the first five years of their lives. Those are the most important years. "Hereditarily is blamed for a good deal, but I believe the first five years of social environment make a stronger determining factor than heredity."

"During the early plastic stages the brain is registering every tone and temper around it. "The subconscious mind is at work and will probably break out in the conscious mind in later years."

The cultivation of calmness and efficiency in children will do much to prolong the life of the human race. Dr. Chapin believes. "It isn't work that kills," the doctor said, "it is worry."

Not one-half of our reserved energy is used by the greatest workers. There is no such thing as physical overwork."

Expert Denies Drug Habit Due to Prohibition

Frenchman Says Abolition of Saloon, if Nothing Else, Justifies Volstead Act in U. S.

Paris, July 29.—"The accusations of American wets' that prohibition is responsible for the increase of the drug habit in America is extremely exaggerated, if not totally unfounded," is the decision of M. Ernest Guy, former attaché of the French high commission to America during the war, who has completed an investigation of prohibition in the United States in the interest of the wine exporters of France. "The increase of the drug habit is general over the world, and includes the non-prohibition countries. It has increased in the same proportions in England and France. It is a part of a German plan to flood the world with the drugs they manufacture."

M. Guy, who is frankly interested in seeking a solution to the stagnation of the French wine industry and trying to find a means for opening up the vineyards' former markets, struck another blow at the traditional arguments of the wets when he declared that his investigation convinced him that the crime wave of the United States has no connection with the liquor question. The same phenomenon has been seen in Europe also, he declares, and is one of the expectable after-effects of the war.

Experiences of Foreigner. "The first effect a foreigner experiences upon arriving in America is a feeling of admiration for the great courage of America in attempting the great social experiment of prohibition. But I can't say I was converted to prohibition by what I saw. To the average American the difference between the saloon and prohibition days is probably not so striking as it is to a foreigner, for the change has been more or less gradual. But for a foreigner, accustomed to the thought of law-abiding Americans find the average difference who are of the stable class—that is the bulwark of the nation—to find him, as I say, in the new attitude of trying to beat the law, to break the law, is quite disappointing to our ideals of America."

Prohibition Justified. "The abolition of the saloon, however, if nothing else, alone quite justifies prohibition. If I, who believe in light wines and beers, were given the choice of accepting either total prohibition or of returning to the old system, I would unhesitatingly choose total prohibition. But fortunately this isn't necessary. The difficulty is that a decision must be made."

M. Guy's report to the wine interests draws a picture of the growing habit of home brewing and the effects of home brewing and the effects of home brewing. He quotes a surgeon of Bellevue hospital, New York, an ardent prohibitionist for years, telling how workmen daily die in his hospital "in convulsions like dogs."

One of the difficulties that he foresees is that if light wines are again reinstated, as he predicts that they will be, the definition of "light" wines will still bar French products. He declares that French wines averaging from 8 to 15 per cent alcohol cannot be produced with a 4 per cent alcohol content, and the reinstatement of 4 per cent wines will not relieve the French ever-increasing stocks.

Diary of a Movie Fan

By GLADYS HALL. Natalie Talmadge Keaton solemnly affirms, via a letter received only the other day, that when Buster Keaton, jr. (properly christened Joseph Francis Keaton, jr.), first saw his paternal parent—a smile. I think none the less of the second Buster for this. It is a wise child that sizes up its own father. And he has, obviously, the makings of a wise and discriminating fan—if nothing else!

However, let us on to weightier matters. I humbly postulate here and now that if Aunt Norma and Aunt Constance and Mother Natalie and Grandma "Peg" don't spoil the new—the brand new—Buster, he will be a most amazing child. For Mrs. Natalie has some definite precepts and theories anent the rearing of her youngling. Here are a few of them—seconded by the first Buster. A woman is never a woman until she is a mother. That's that.

Small Buster is going to have everything his father did not have when a boy. As these things are too numerous to detail, we will leave them to your good imaginations, and if you will keep careful track of what Buster, jr., acquires he proceeds to grow up you will have a fairly accurate knowledge of what Father Buster missed in his most smileless youth.

Buster is to be the president. This may startle you. But after all, why not? As a matter of fact, Natalie has hit upon a simple, expedient and admirable plan of foretelling her son's large future. She is going to present him, "most any day now, with an apple, a dollar bill and a Bible. If he eats the apple—he will be a farmer. If he plays with the dollar bill—he will be a banker. If he reads the Bible—he will be a preacher-man. Pure mathematics. And if, by chance, they come upon him playing with the dollar bill, eating the apple and reading the Bible all at once, they will know that they Introducing Natalie Talmadge in her latest role. have an embryo politician on their hands. Upon which they will introduce him to William Jennings Bryan—and await results. As a matter of serious fact, small Buster is to choose his own career, with no help from the family.

At any rate the heir to the houses of Talmadge and Keaton is well worth the watchful watching. I should say. (Copyright, 1922.)

Which End of Fido Should Be Muzzled?

Atlanta, Ga., July 29.—On which end must a dog be muzzled? Georgia courts will be called on to decide this question.

When the state legislature passed a law requiring all dogs running at large to be muzzled the legislators failed to designate that the muzzle should be placed on the nose.

The trouble arose when an unsuspecting and unmuzzled canine belonging to J. N. O'Neil, ran about of the city dog catcher. When the dog catcher attempted to seize the dog O'Neil interfered with him, he claims, and refused to let him take the animal.

The next act showed O'Neil being summoned to appear in police court to answer a charge of disorderly conduct preferred against him by the dog catcher.

O'Neil says he isn't guilty because the dog catcher had no right to seize the dog anyway. The law, he says, is unconstitutional because it fails to specify which end shall be muzzled, and he is going to let the supreme court of the state decide it.
