Common Sense

How Are You Treating Your Relatives?

Perhaps you may have been more successful than your relatives, and you have drifted away from them. You want them to leave you alone, and you will do the same by them.

You would be ashamed to introduce them to your friends.

In other words, you have turned down your own blood-relation for those who have a mere passing interest in you, who like you as an entertainer, or because you are a liberal host or hostess, or you may hold a position which makes some persons proud to own you as a friend, or you may be financially well fixed.

Suppose you lose all these qualities, what becomes of these friends? Are these real, true friends, who would stick through everything? Some day you may be glad to go back to your relatives.

Because you have shunned them many years, you should not expect the same degree of cordiality and welcome you would get had you treated them well in your years of affluence.

When you get older there is bound to be a time when you will long for some member of your own family, a time when no one else can fill the place which is vacant in your heart of hearts.

Parents' Problems

How can kindness best be taught to very young children?

A pet animal is a help in teaching this lesson. Stories are other aids. Example is the surest teacher.

A Dollar Down.

Mr. Spendix—Any instalments due today?

Mrs. Spendix—No, dear, I think not.

Mr. Spendix—Any payments due on the house, the radio, the furniture, the rugs or the books?

Mrs. Spendix—No.

Mr. Spendix—Then I have $10 we don't need. What do you say we buy a new car?

"Guess what's for Mother today? Honey, it's me, and I'm here to help you. Kellogg's Corn Flakes all summer long because they are good for stomachs! Guess what, Daddy, now you can have some quick!"

Wonderful for warm days!
Kellogg's CORN FLAKES with fresh fruit!

Play safe with your diet—and your health—this summer. Eat lighter, sustaining foods and work better, play better, sleep better and feel better.

Kellogg's Corn Flakes digest without taxing the stomach—yet they are satisfying! There isn't anything more refreshing, palatable or beneficial on a hot day than a big bowlful of Kellogg's with plenty of cold milk and some luscious fresh fruit!

My Marriage Problems

Adele Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

Why Harry Underwood Sat in Judgment on Made and Dicky.

I have faced few more painful things in my life than that of relating to Harry Underwood the story he had wished concerning Grace Draper's instigation of the plot to kidnap Junior. It was a much longer task, also, than I had anticipated, for he interrupted me with countless questions about apparently trifling details concerning the girl's sojourn in our home.

"Never mind the high spots of the thing," he said shortly after I had begun the story with a voice that I could not keep quite steady. "I got all those out of the newspapers—went to the public library and dug 'em out as soon as I got back from—wherever I was."

He finished the sentence with a characteristic impish grin, and then went on.

"But it's the way that devil worked you people that gets me. Of course, it was to be expected you'd fall for her—I can imagine the repentant, humbled-to-the-dust-dope she handed to you, and you, with your divine forgiveness."

He broke off abruptly with an explosive oath. Then he was silent for a few seconds, while, in spite of his apparent sincerity, a vague suspicion crept into my mind.

In his manner, his vocabulary, showed abhorrence toward Grace Draper, yet—the handkerchief which he had dropped at my feet in the Easthampton shop, using the pretense that it was mine as an excuse to speak to me, had been her property beyond a doubt.

A Corroding Doubt.

I could not forget that he and the girl of whom he was speaking had Legion Head to Be Guest at Women's Overseas Ball.

When Hanford McNider, American Legion president, arrives in Omaha, Friday night, on his first visit, he will be invited to return on Armistice night, November 11, to attend the second annual ball of the Women's Overseas Service league, at the Fountelle.

Miss Frances Nieman, president, will extend the invitation.

Miss Louise Wells of Chicago, national president of the Women's Overseas Service league, has already promised to come for the event.

Proceeds will be used to carry on the local unit's hospital work for needy ex-service men.

The overseas girls' August meeting will be a picnic supper Thursday evening at Elmwood park. They will attend the ceremony at Fort Crook, Friday, when James W. Hanbery of Omaha is awarded the distinguished service cross.

Household Hints

Do not pull down the draperies that are on fire and thus spread the flames. Remove all objects near by and with a wet broom smother the burning pieces as they fall.

Bedsprings with designs in colored fabric quilted on are very attractive. Sometimes a floral design is used, often of morning glories of roses and mauve on a cream white ground. Sometimes a figured design is used and sometimes a conventional geometric design is chosen.

Huckback towels have become the smart abiding place for file lace now that it is not so much used for neckties. It is used as bandages of insertion and as an edge, either wide or narrow, and sometimes a towel shows both a band of inserting and a border of the lace. However, the towels on which this lace appears only as an edge are best, as they are quite durable and serviceable.

Golf in Western Nebraska.

Rev. and Mrs. Victor West returned last week from a month's vacation, when they motored through Nebraska, visiting friends at Clay Center and at Cambridge. While in the latter town Rev. West assisted at the laying of a cornerstone for a new Methodist church. According to Mr. West, many of the towns in western Nebraska are laying out golf courses and building country clubs in approved city fashion. He spoke highly of the course at Hastings, and also of the new course at Cambridge, where they play on Sundays. He says that the buffalo grass, which grows profusely in western Nebraska, stays so short that the courses do not have to be mowed except for occasional weeds.

I Will Even Prepay the Postage if You Will Make This Amazing Test.

I say positively that Asthma and Hay Fever can immediately be controlled, no matter what age or in what climate you live.

To prove this all I want is to send you this medicine, the wonderful success of which has spread all over the country. Simply send me your name and I will prepay charges on a regular size bottle. Use it ten days and then if satisfied with your improvement you pay me only $1.25. Otherwise you owe nothing.

Scores of people say this is different from anything else in the world and that the first bottle enabled them to sleep well, stopped choking, cleared the head and lungs and gave real comfort.

Don't send a penny; don't pay a penny unless you feel it is right to pay. I trust everyone. Clyde Leungood, 1923 S. W. Blvd., Rosedale, Kansas.

SLEEPY-TIME TALES MORE TALES OF CUFFY BEAR BY ARTHUR SCOTT BAILEY

Mr. Bear's Narrow Escape.

It was a great year for raspberries. Mr. Bear said that he couldn't recall a summer when there had been so many, nor such big ones.

"We must all go a-berrying!" Mr. Bear exclaimed.

"Yes! Yes!" the two youngsters, Cuffy and Silkie, began to clamor.

Mr. Bear nodded.

"Let's go tomorrow!" cried Cuffy. And both Mr. and Mrs. Bear said they would.

The children could hardly wait. The next morning they set out so eagerly for the berry patch that their father had to keep telling them not to go so fast. He was a huge person and he didn't like to hurry.

Mr. Bear jumped. He jumped not only once but many times.

But if Mr. Bear was a slow walker, he was a fast berry-picker. No other member of the family could strip a bush of its choice fruit as quickly as he could—and eat it at the same time. He even ate the leaves, too. He claimed that that way saved trouble and was "more filling."

For once in his life Cuffy had too much to eat. After he had spent two hours in stuffing himself, he tired of the sport and looked about for something else to do. His mother and Silkie had lain down to rest in a snug nook between the rocks. His father was still busily picking berries.

Now, the berry patch was in an old pasture. Above it ran a steep ledge, on the crest of which a great boulder rested, as if it had intended to roll down through the pasture, but had changed its mind just before it was too late to stop. As Cuffy glanced around, the boulder caught his eye. In another moment he had started to scramble up to it.

Once on top of the ledge Cuffy

Bear forgot everything, except a plan that had popped into his head. He forgot the raspberries. He forgot his mother and Silkie. He even forgot his father, who was in plain sight below him, still picking and eating berries.

Perhaps it was no wonder that Cuffy had thoughts for nothing except his big idea. Yes! It was a big one. He meant to push the boulder until it dropped from its resting place and went rolling down the hillside.

Cuffy crept behind the boulder and threw his weight against it. The great stone rocked. He was sure of that. But try as he would, he couldn't dislodge it.

He crept around in front of it. Ah! He saw there a much smaller stone nestling almost beneath it. This he shoved aside. Then, going back, he gave a mighty heave.

Hurrah! The boulder moved forward slowly, stopped, then moved again. Cuffy heard a great grinding noise. A sound as of thunder followed as the boulder took its first drop off the top of the ledge. And Cuffy gave a bellow of delight.

Right afterward Mr. Bear bellowed, too. But his was not a cry of joy. It was one of fear. Hearing a strange noise he had turned his head away from a raspberry bush just in time to see some great, gray shape plunging down upon him.

Mr. Bear jumped. He jumped not only once, but many times. The last glimpse Cuffy had of his father showed Mr. Bear still jumping, as he plunged into the forest.

The boulder, too, had gone crashing out of sight, leaving a path of flattened bushes behind it.

"What was the terrible sound?" cried Mrs. Bear as she came a-running from her nap. "And where's your father?"

"Pa ran away," Cuffy told her truthfully.

Forever Mr. Bear liked to talk about what he called "the landslide," and "his narrow escape."

Cuffy never asked his father any questions about the affair. He didn't want his father to question him. But Mr. Bear punished him, for he would never let him visit that raspberry patch again.

"It's a dangerous place," Mr. Bear said in his deep, rumbling voice.
