

Pilots' Complaints Won't Be Decided Until Egge's Back

Mail Service Chief Says He Will Have to Confer First With Other Officials.

Decision on complaints of air mail pilots against A. R. Dunphy, superintendent, will not be announced until Carl Egge, chief of the service, returns to Washington for a conference with other postal officials, Egge, who was in Omaha yesterday, declared.

"Postal inspectors had not yet completed their investigation two weeks ago," he said, "and I have been away from Washington for a month. It will be one of the first matters I take up on my return."

On Routine Trip.

Egge denied his arrival Wednesday had anything to do with the hangar explosion.

"It's my regular inspection trip," he said. "Mrs. Egge accompanies me because we lost our only son a few weeks ago and we are trying to forget our grief."

He made a statement in vindication of Superintendent Dunphy from pilots' charges that Dunphy was not a "flying man" and therefore could not forestall danger to flyers.

"It's not required that an executive should be a pilot, but Dunphy happens to be one of the few superintendents in the country who can fly a plane," Egge asserted.

"If there are any service complaints, such as pilots being forced to fly in unsafe planes or in unfavorable weather, pilots know they can report direct to me. 'Safety first' is my motto."

No Night Flying Soon.

Omaha's chances for immediate night flying are remote, according to Egge.

"We will start from New York as soon as engineers complete their plans for transcontinental night lighting of fields," he said.

He will confer today with Commissioner Larson of the Chamber of Commerce on local conditions. Egge will go to Minneapolis from here.

Getra "Do Hickey"

Mrs. Gray possessed wonderful power to fascinate—much to the mystification of her friends. This is what she told me: "While having my hair dressed I was attracted to a girl that had what I considered the most attractive eyes and lashes I had ever seen. She had indeed my heart so I made an appointment to have a few stray gray hairs touched up; after she had done the hair-dresser told me who she was and said, 'If she would only use the same thing as her gray hairs which she uses on her eyebrows and lashes, she would not have a stray hair.' "That was my chance to find out what she was using and she told me 'Liquore.' I bought a bottle at once and besides using it for my eyebrows, lashes and a few stray hairs I had so much trouble in getting it, I conceived the idea of making what I call 'Do Hickey.' "I found that 'Liquore' will not smart, you or rub on, absolutely harmless to the skin and hair. "That's the secret that will give anyone that magnetic spark."

RADIO Will Radio Take Place of Phones?

Wireless Experts State That Radio Phone Will Not Reduce Use of Wire Phone.

"Do you think that the radiophone will ever supplant the wire telephone for ordinary communication?"

This is one of the questions that has knocked the radio editor for a goal.

So much has been written about the untold possibilities of radio that its limitations are frequently ignored.

It is altogether unlikely that radiotelephony will ever reduce in the slightest degree the use of the wire phone.

One small cable can carry wire messages by means of the latter than the air channels of an entire city area can efficiently handle at the same time.

In congested districts it is safe to say that the radio-telephone will never be utilized for ordinary personal conversation.

Too Much Interference.

Even in long distance work it is extremely unlikely that the wire lines will be supplanted. Radio is doing such notable work in carrying its message to so many people at the same instant that it would seem foolish to attempt to jam the air with person-to-person messages when there can be just as well handled by the older method.

Only where wire cannot be strung does it seem likely that the wireless will ever be called on for this sort of work and even there the telegraph will probably be the selected method because it is cheaper and lends itself to wave lengths so high that interference is greatly diminished.

Woman Predicts 'Baby Training' Bill Will Pass

Ten Million Dollars Would Be Made Available for Physical Development of School Children.

Federal aid for compulsory physical education in public schools is the objective of the National Physical Education service, represented by Mrs. Jane Ogle, who is visiting in Omaha.

She explained that her organization is a feature of the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

"We are confident of the passage of the Fess-Capper bill, now resting in the education committees of the house and senate at Washington," Mrs. Ogle said.

"This measure carries an annual appropriation of $10,000,000 and there seems to be no opposition to the plan. It is proposed to give federal aid, dollar for dollar, to states that comply with the requirements of the bill. One of the requirements is half an hour physical education every day. Twenty-eight states have compulsory physical education laws."

"This federal bill is endorsed by many national organizations, including the Rotary clubs, League of Women Voters, Federation of Women's clubs, Parent-Teacher associations and Council of Jewish Women."

"If the Fess-Capper bill becomes a law, its provisions will be administered through the national department of education."

Members of the league will be on duty each day to furnish information regarding candidates for political office and to distribute literature from the national and state league.

The league also will compile a local questionnaire, which will be sent to all candidates prior to the November election.

Preceding the business session W. F. Baxter spoke on the tariff question. "Tariffs are the basis of war," declared Mr. Baxter.

"I have been shipping to the Chicago market for years," said Mr. Grady, "until it became a habit and it has taken me quite a while to learn that Omaha is a better market and closer to home. I am more than pleased at the prices received and the good profits garnered and I intend in the future to send all my livestock to Omaha."

Mother Obtains Babe After Legal Battle

Mrs. F. L. Hartzell, 1703 Dodge street, was reunited with her 11-months-old baby yesterday after four months of absence. The child was in the custody of Mrs. Jesse Silkey of Milwaukee, with whom Mrs. Hartzell left it on coming to Omaha in search for work last March.

"She was so attached to my baby that she wrote me she was going to run away with it," the mother said. Mrs. Hartzell at once enlisted legal aid and went to Milwaukee, where, after a long legal battle, the judge ordered the child returned to the mother.

Mother! This Is Important

This is calling to your attention a danger THAT SHOULD NOT BE in connection with a radio set.

If your son or some other member of your household owns a radio set, you are aware of the pleasure and the education such a set brings. There should not be any danger in its use.

The danger may be in connection with the erection of the radio aerial. Many radio aeriels have been erected on electric light poles. Chances of the aerial wires coming in contact with the light wires makes this practice extremely dangerous.

Just the Other Day

A boy climbed into a tree to place an aerial above the electric light wires. The coil of aerial wire dangling below came in contact with the "live" wire. The boy on the ground who was holding the aerial wire was severely burned.

In the interest of protecting life and property, THE NEBRASKA POWER COMPANY publishes the following notice:
