

Body of Inventor Laid to Rest on Mountain Top

Mortal Remains of Alexander Graham Bell Buried in Tomb Blasted From Solid Rock.

Baddeck, N. S., Aug. 5.—All the villagers of Baddeck trudged to the peak of Beinn Bhroghann mountain last evening and stood in reverence at sunset while the body of Dr. Alexander Graham Bell was laid tenderly to rest after a life of 73 years in which he gave to the world the telephone and other inventions.

Over his tomb, blasted from rock, that looked down on all of eastern Nova Scotia and the beautiful Bras d'Or lakes, stood the watch tower built years ago by the inventor. Below the quiet woodland and the serene lake on whose waters Dr. Bell experimented with speed boats and fast water sleds.

Short Service at Home.

First there were short services at the hillside homestead, attended only by those who had been very close to Dr. Bell at work or play. When these were ended, bronzed workmen employed on the estate lifted to their shoulders his casket which had been built in Dr. Bell's workshops out of rugged pine, and carried it to his coach, which led the cortege up to the very highest tip of the mountain.

Recite Favorite Poem.

Friends of the inventor recited one of his favorites—Longfellow's "Psalm of Life." Tell me not in mournful numbers Life is but an empty dream. Then as the day departed and night came on, the body was entombed in the rock.

Ford to Build New Plant in Illinois

Site for $10,000,000 Assembly Factory Purchased on Outskirts of Chicago.

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 5.—It was learned here that Henry Ford had bought 60 acres of land in Hegewich, Ill., as a site for a $10,000,000 assembly plant located at One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street and Torrance avenue. The purchase price is said to be $1,000,000. The tract is on the Calumet river just below the forks which is at present the limit of deep water navigation.

Assistant to De Valera Buried With Simple Honors

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 5.—(Special) ed the funeral of Harry J. Boland, close friend and assistant of Eamon de Valera, who died Tuesday night of wounds received while attempting to evade arrest by national army troops. The band, which is a usual feature at republican funerals, was absent.

Woman Wants Guardian Appointed for Parents

Lenox, Ia., Aug. 5.—(Special.)—Mrs. Julia Kirkman has filed a petition in the district court of Taylor county asking the appointment of a guardian for her parents, John and Julia Kinkley, each of whom is 85.

Federal Reserve Bank Building Urged for Omaha

Washington, Aug. 5.—(Special Telegram.)—Senator Hitchcock has introduced a resolution authorizing the Federal Reserve bank at St. Louis to build a handsome bank structure in Omaha. The cost of the building, it is estimated, will be in the neighborhood of from $500,000 to $800,000. The law now prescribes that no buildings shall be erected costing more than $250,000 without consent of congress.

Black Faces Operation.

San Jose, Cal., Aug. 5.—John Black, famous golfer, who approached to within one stroke of the national title at the recent championship matches in Chicago, faced an operation here today, confident that it would assure him of retaining the form that has made his name known wherever golf is played.

Body Identified

Lake Geneva, Wis., Aug. 5.—The body of a youth found shot through the heart on the road near here last Thursday, has been identified as that of Frank J. Maier, Des Moines, Ia., on receipt of advices from the chief of detectives at Des Moines. No inquest was held, the district attorney holding it was a case of suicide.

HIS T. B. PILGRIMAGES

A few years back we published the story of an Indiana man who, having consumption, chased the cure like a shuttlecock between Indiana and the west in a very foolish way.

He used up all his own funds, all the funds he could get his hands on, threw away whatever chance to get well he had, possibly spread infection widely, harmed himself and a good many other people, and all for the want of some common sense.

Here is a companion story which comes from the Detroit health department.

A man entered the consumption ward in the Herman Keefe hospital in 1918. He left the institution without permission after having been there only a few months.

He had an idea he would get well if he could go west.

He solicited funds for that purpose. Since that time he has repeatedly solicited funds for the purpose of going somewhere. He is armed with a letter from a physician, who states that the bearer has consumption and will go west to live there, where he can get financial assistance.

He must tell a fine story, for this is the record of his travels on collected money:

To Colorado and return, three times.
Illinois and return, three times.
To Minnesota, once.
To Iowa, once.

In addition he has been in various Detroit tuberculosis sanitariums a total of about ten different times.

Vaughan learns that for a time at least this man collected $160 a month for several months from business men.

From the standpoint of the giver this record is highly credible to the human sympathy of the business men, but not to their knowledge, judgment, and common sense.

From the standpoint of the collector, the record shows salesmanship of a high order, but that is all that can be said for it.

If the Colorado climate offered him anything, he should have stayed there. Whatever advantage there is in climate, it is only for those who settle down, become contented and happy, and fit in.

If the sanitarium in Detroit were the place for him he ought to have stayed there.

Knocking around Minnesota, Illinois and Iowa, chasing a cure, was about the last word in foolishness.

How much consumption he spread as he traveled around there is no way of knowing.

The amount of money he has wasted could have saved the lives of several people had it been wisely used.

"Off again, on again, Finegan," is not a policy that cures consumption. Unwise giving in this case did no good. In fact, it did harm.

Ants Come After Food.
Mrs. E. D. writes: "Will you tell me a good remedy for my room? It is very damp. My bed and bedding smell moldy and damp. I keep my house clean, but it is very annoying with this damp odor at night. I air my blankets and feather bed as much as possible.

"My bedrooms are set off from the outside of the house and perhaps that is the reason. In summer I am also troubled with centipedes and ants. I live in the basement of a private brick house. Get plenty of sun and air."

REPLY.
Nothing equals sunlight and air. If you have plenty of these disinfectants, you need nothing else.

Ants come in after food. Cleanliness is an effective anti-ant measure. Write to the bureau of entomology, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for recent bulletins on control of ants.

What you call "centerpedes" come into your house in search of insects. They catch and eat ants, flies and other insects.

If you get rid of all other insects, the many-legged boys will quit you.

This Hidebound World.
Nancy writes: "I notice that E. L. H. writes that he or she has an illegitimate son.

"I would like to take violent exception to the use of 'illegitimate' as applying to children. Babies are not 'illegitimate'; they are right as rain, as legitimate as sunshine or the air we breathe. It is the father and mothers who, 'without benefit of clergy' thrust them into an unfeeling world guided by hidebound and moss-covered conventions, who are 'illegitimate.'

"Don't you agree with, doctor?"
REPLY.
Well, Nancy, you have cut off quite a chunk. Being so peeved, you will not stop until you have righted the matter, I am sure.

First tackle the churches, then the women's clubs, the legislatures and, finally, the dictionaries.

When you get the dictionaries changed, count on me to fall in line.

Milk Quaffing Hazards.
Mrs. K. writes: "Please let me know if it is safe to drink milk. I hear the milk is not pure."
REPLY.
If you live in a city in which the milk is pasteurized under good supervision it is safe to drink it; otherwise, drinking milk is somewhat hazardous.

Sun-Lamp Treatments.
B. I. writes: "Will you kindly advise me if the Alpine sun lamp is in any way beneficial and in what way?"
REPLY.
Yes. In the treatment of tuberculosis, especially of the bones, joints, skin and glands.

In rheumatism, neuralgia and neuritis.
In rickets and other diseases.
