

Senate Battle in Nebraska Is Being Watched

Unusual Interest Shown by National Politicians in Similar Contests of Nebraska and Indiana.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 12.—(Special.)—Politicians throughout Indiana who invariably have their eyes trained on Washington, regard the campaign with a united party back of him. In the primary he defeated Senator Harry S. New for renomination by a safe margin, and this in the face of the fact that Senator New was given the almost solid support of the republican state committee, the republican state chairman, Governor Warren T. McCray and other state officials. Senator New succeeded in retaining control of the organization, and that body is now bending every effort towards the election of the entire republican ticket.

Never More United.

It is pointed out by former supporters of Senator New and those of Mr. Beveridge that never have the republicans of the state been more united in a determination to elect the ticket than at present. It is asserted by those who are in position to know that Mr. Beveridge will receive a heavy democratic vote. It is not, so it is said, that democrats are by any means in accord with all that the Harding administration has done, but they feel that the administration is faithfully endeavoring and succeeding in bringing order out of chaos and that there should not be a divided congress.

One of the points of similarity between the Indiana and Nebraska campaign, it is suggested, is that Mr. Beveridge and R. B. Howell, the Nebraska republican senatorial nominee, have each been loyal supporters of the direct primary. In the last Indiana legislature, which was strongly republican, an effort was made to repeal the primary law and enact a law returning to the convention system. Mr. Beveridge not only opposed repeal, but went over the state speaking in opposition to the repeal and crystallized sentiment to such an extent that the legislature voted down the proposed law, thus retaining the direct primary. It is remarked here that in Nebraska Mr. Howell openly espoused the direct primary in his campaign.

In Complete Accord.

Another issue on which Mr. Beveridge and Mr. Howell are said to be in complete accord is that of prohibition and strict enforcement of the Volstead law. Both Beveridge and Howell long have been ardent advocates of prohibition, it is asserted, and it is not probable that the voters will care to take chances on that important issue with men who are unknown in their views, or who are regarded as friendly to the "wets."

It is the understanding here, it is said, that Senator Hitchcock is a "wet," or at best very friendly to the "wets." This estimate of Senator Hitchcock is based largely on his utterances in the past on the liquor question, it is said, and that there is nothing to indicate that he has had a change of heart.

Another thing that has caused Indiana republicans to take special notice of the Nebraska senatorial fight is the fact that following the selection of Will Hays, an Indiana man, to the post of republican national chairman, Mr. Hays named Mr. Howell as a member of his advisory board, with whom he worked throughout the campaign. This association resulted in a warm personal friendship between the two men, which has continued to the present day. It is known that Mr. Hays confidently expects Indiana and Nebraska to elect Beveridge and Howell and in that way strengthen and advance measures looking to the best interests of the nation.

Falls City, Neb., Aug. 12.—(Special Telegram.)—The body of a man found in the Missouri river near Corning Ferry, Mo., was identified as that of Adolph Rehs, employed by the Wood Bros. Decomposition of the body indicated that it had been in the water at least a week. The man was apparently between 45 and 50.

Arthur Griffith, President of Dail Eireann, Dies of "Flu"

Irish Free State Leader Collapses After Eating Hearty Breakfast This Morning.

Belfast, Aug. 12.—(By A. P.)—Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann, died in Dublin today of influenza, it has been learned in Belfast.

Mr. Griffith was ill only 10 days and his illness was not considered serious. Yesterday, however, he suffered a sudden relapse and died early this morning.

His death occurred at 9:45 o'clock this morning in St. Vincent's hospital, Dublin, where he entered 10 days ago.

for an operation for tonsillitis. He was recovering from the operation and apparently regaining his normal strength during the last few days.

In fact, Mr. Griffith had responded to his treatment so well that he was able to leave the hospital daily for his official duties, returning to the institution at night.

This morning he ate a hearty breakfast and was going upstairs when he suddenly collapsed. He was carried into his room and a doctor was immediately summoned. He said Mr. Griffith was suffering from a cerebral hemorrhage. A priest was then sent for and he had just finished administering the last rites of the church when Mr. Griffith expired.

Arthur Griffith was one of the leaders in the creation of the Irish free state. He was one of the founders of the Sinn Fein movement in Ireland and from the beginning has been among the foremost leaders directing its activities. He has been somewhat out of the limelight, however, during the recent military activities, which have been largely directed on behalf of the free state forces by Michael Collins, head of the Irish provisional government, set up under the terms of the Anglo-Irish treaty.

Mr. Griffith was formerly an editor of Dublin and later established the newspaper, United Irishman, followed by the Sinn Fein and then the Nationality, both of which represented the wing of the republican movement favoring dominion status for Ireland.

He first attracted attention by his uncompromising attitude for abrogation of the sessions of the British parliament at Westminster. This idea gradually formed the nucleus of the Sinn Fein organization which took the place of the Irish nationalist movement.

In October, 1919, Griffith was elected president of the Irish assembly in the absence of Eamon De Valera, who was in the United States. In October of the same year he was elected president of the permanent vice-presidents of the Sinn Fein organization.

In July, 1919, Griffith was elected acting president of the Irish assembly in the absence of Eamon De Valera, who was in the United States. In October of the same year he was elected president of the permanent vice-presidents of the Sinn Fein organization.

Griffith was arrested in Dublin in November, 1920, and spent seven months in Mount Joy prison. During his imprisonment he issued a message to the Irish people as to the conduct of the Sinn Fein organization. An attempt was made to rescue him from Mount Joy, but the attempt failed to carry out its mission.

The return of Mr. De Valera from America was attributed to Griffith's imprisonment, as Mr. De Valera upon his return resumed the active direction of Sinn Fein affairs.

Early in June, 1921, there were reports of a London conference at which Irish leaders would be invited to consult with members of the British cabinet. Griffith was mentioned among the probable delegates. His release from Mount Joy prison followed later in the same month.

Griffith accompanied De Valera to London in July, when the extended series of conferences was opened. Later, when the conference shifted to different points, Griffith was appointed chairman of the Sinn Fein mission. He was in London through October, November and December carrying on the negotiations which culminated on December 5 with the signing of the treaty between Great Britain and Ireland.

A fundamental difference between Eamon De Valera and Griffith in their political views has been marked since the inception of the republican movement. While De Valera has stood uncompromisingly for absolute independence, Griffith, with Collins, held to the view that the system of Irish freedom typified by the free state treaty was the best for the Irish nation. The two factions worked together in all matters until the Anglo-Irish conference was called, when their divergent views came into open conflict, with the result that even with the treaty ratified by vote warfare against its execution continued.

Griffith was never a republican, in the strict meaning of the word as applied to Irish politics.

Promise of First Napoleon Fulfilled in Saar Valley

Vow Given to Marshal Ney by Corsican to Establish Supreme Court at Saar Louis Is Made Reality After Lapse of 177 Years.

Paris, Aug. 12.—(By A. P.)—The promise made by Napoleon to Marshal Ney 177 years ago has just been fulfilled by the commission governing the Saar valley under supervision of the league of nations. The commission has authorized the institution of a supreme court at Saar Louis, the celebrated marshal's birthplace.

It is a town of less than 10,000 inhabitants, which was the old capital and military stronghold when Saar was a French province.

When General Mangin passed through the Saar with his troops on the way to the Rhine, some of the old inhabitants who retained French sympathies reminded him of the emperor's promise.

"But I'm not Napoleon's successor," General Mangin replied. "I will pass on the request to the proper authority."

General Mangin was relieved of his command in the Rhineland before he could take steps in the matter but the Saar commission found no objection to the project since it was not only gratifying the town of Saar Louis, but was considered of real utility.

Use Ex-Kaiser's Chateau.
Four hundred children from the French devastated regions this week are being housed in the chateau which was the residence of the late Emperor William. They are on an outing at the magnificent chateau at Urville, near Metz, which belonged to former Emperor William and which is now a part of the national domain of France.

This district was one of the former emperor's favorite dwelling places. It formerly contained rich French tapestries, which were removed just before the armistice, along with most of the furnishings. The chateau will be devoted to the recreation of children from northern France during summer seasons.

Carpenter Is Financier.
The fight between Georges Carpentier, European heavyweight boxing champion, and "Battling" Siki, the Senegalese, aspirant for heavyweight honors, scheduled for September 10, may leave unsettled the much-discussed question of Carpentier's ability as a fighter, but already there is assurance that it will confirm his own keen business sense and that of his manager, Francois Descamps.

A huge permanent arena, seating 65,000 spectators, will be built for this event. Carpentier and Descamps each hold 100,000 francs of stock in this enterprise. Together they hold 40 per cent of all the stock, and Descamps is one of the directors.

Carpentier has been guaranteed 300,000 francs as his share of the purse, in addition to 20 per cent of the gate receipts which he will receive by virtue of being a shareholder.

The arena will be used not only for boxing bouts but for bicycle and foot races. It will be known as the "Buffalo," because the manager formerly acted in the same capacity for the Buffalo Bill circus on its French tours years ago.

Georges is still busy being filmed in England and has not begun training for the bout. He does not expect to be free before August 20. "Battling" Siki, who possesses so, usually extending to the ankle. The waistline, however, is rising again and next season it will be almost back to its normal position. Sleeves are slightly altered, being full above the elbow and tight from the elbow to the wrist.

There is a new idea in skirts. They are split in front but otherwise they are like those of last season, being cut straight up and down with great fullness, accentuated when the wearer walks.

Dressmakers are trying hard to make next winter a season of color. Much brown, old gold and green are being shown, but black continues popular. Dark green and blue will be extensively used for afternoon dresses.

Backless Gown Revived.
One of the younger enterprising designers has introduced a dress with a three-quarter length coat in place of the three-piece suit which he made such a success last year. It promises to be equally smart.

The new materials include, silk, velvet and velveteen, the former for afternoon and evening gowns and the latter for afternoon only. The young designer mentioned above has resurrected the backless gown which is more backless than ever, the bare space extending from one side of the back to the other.

A British officer, who conducts one of the largest establishments in the Rue La Paix, has introduced Egyptian and Hindu motives in evening gowns with turbans of metal cloth to match and tiaras of imitation stones.

Short fur coats of expensive skins will be worn extensively this winter. Evening gowns will be more elaborate than ever, the idea being that women will go in for a more "dressy" appearance next season.

Members of the local lodge of Elks discussed Friday night tentative plans for the new club building to be erected at Eighteenth and Dodge streets, and deferred final action until Friday night, August 25.

Attendees at the meeting agreed that the lodge room should have a seating capacity of 1,500, including gallery, and that the dimensions should be 78 by 78 feet. There will be 10 bowling alleys in the basement.

Present plans call for a 10-story building, with store rooms on first floor. Some of the floors will be equipped with sleeping rooms. The estimate of the cost of the building is $1,000,000. The site is 132 by 132 feet.

Accommodations will be provided for women.
